French Attack on Somme as Nazis Hint Paris Is Next Goal

CAPTURED KING LEOPOLD MAY GET NEW THRONE

Nazis Plan Flemish, Dutch State.

BERLIN, May 28.—King Leopold III. of the Belgians, second king to bow to Adolf Hitler after his fourth blitzkrieg in nine months, will be treated with the regard due a soldier who fought bravely, the German army headquarters announced today. The first king to comply with the wishes of Nazi Germany was King Christian X. of Denmark.

The Germans, it was learned, already have assigned Leopold to a "well known" Belgian castle—possibly in the beautiful, mountainous Ardennes forest. He was expected to be allowed to remain there until it is determined what to do with him and his country.

Considered Sympathetic to Nazis.

Leopold always has been considered by the Germans as sympathetic to the Nazi cause. Now, after his surrender, many believe Hitler not only will treat him with the greatest courtesy, but that he may grant Leopold a certain amount of political influence in his country, provided he accepts Nazi supervision.

Nazi officialdom even is considering the formation of a Flemish-Dutch kingdom over which Leopold would rule. The new state would replace the old Belgium and would incorporate the parts of the Netherlands which heretofore have been claimed by Flemish irredenta groups. Flemish, the Low German language of northern Belgium, is closely related to Dutch.

The government of Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands which escaped to England must, in Nazi parlance, "be punished." When and if the reorganization of Europe is enforced according to Nazi wishes, the Netherlands is to retain only a small measure of independence, to judge by Nazi conversations in the German capital.

Expect Troops to Be Freed.

It was believed that the Belgian army would be treated as were Norwegian soldiers. They were freed to return home upon giving assurances they would not fight against Germany again. Such a course offers double value: It unburdens Germany and puts new hands to work. The surrendered Belgian army is believed to have numbered at least 300,000 men.

Germans believed that Crown Prince Umberto of Italy, brother-in-law of King Leopold, may have helped convince the Belgian monarch that his greatest duty was to prevent further bloodshed. Umberto is married to Leopold's sister, Marie José.

German radio accounts of Leopold's capitulation said he made his decision after stormy meetings with allied Generalissimo Maxime Weygand and his own generals, and after the French had pleaded with him to postpone surrender for at least a week.

Asked One More Week.

Weygand, this account said, was unable to lend further assistance to the Belgian northern army. Yet, it added, he wanted the Belgians to resist further to permit the French to reorganize their Somme-Aisne front to the south and "enable England to protect herself against invasion."

A German radio report, credited to reliable sources in Geneva, said Weygand returned to Paris Sunday after a visit to the Belgian general headquarters under the impression that Leopold was about to capitulate.

Belgian negotiators appointed by Leopold approached German lines late last night carrying an illuminated white flag to ask for an armistice, the commentary Dienst aus Deutschland said. The Germans replied that unconditional surrender would be the only terms acceptable, the commentary asserted.

The negotiators then recrossed their lines and returned several hours later with the word that the terms were accepted. Only five hours passed—11 p. m. yesterday to 4 a. m. today—from the time the negotiators first appeared until the Belgian surrender became official, it was said.

Seven Named by President on Defense Staff

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 28.—President Roosevelt today named six men and a woman—three industrialists, two New Deal officials, a labor leader, and a college dean—as a commission to correlate all civilian phases of the 3¼ billion dollar national defense program with national economy.

The group, which will be technically known as the advisory commission to the council on national defense, will dovetail the rearmament program with industry, labor, agriculture, transportation, finance, and consumer needs.

Names Division Chiefs.

At his press conference Mr. Roosevelt named the seven divisions of the commission, the division chiefs, and their duties as follows:

1. Industrial materials—Edward R. Stettinius Jr. of the United States Steel corporation, who will supervise production of raw materials from the mine up to the point of fabrication.

2. Industrial production—William S. Knudsen of General Motors corporation, who will handle the manufacture of items such as tanks and their engines and planes and their engines.

3. Employment—Sidney S. Hillman, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, who will coördinate employment on armaments and the training of apprentices in the National Youth administration, the Civilian Conservation corps, and similar units.

4. Agriculture. Chester C. Davis of the federal reserve board, who will supervise farm production so that supplies will be available for domestic consumption and export.

5. Transportation. Ralph Budd, Chicago rail executive, who will perfect organization against possible transportation jams.

6. Price Stabilization. Leon Henderson of the Securities and Exchange commission, who will head a statistical bureau to gather data on price trends to prevent price booming.

7. Consumer Protection. Miss Harriet Elliott, dean of women at the University of North Carolina, who will gather statistics on consumer price trends with a view to preventing profiteering.

William H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to the President, was named as secretary to the commission. The President explained McReynolds would serve as a sort of clearing house for the group because of his familiarity with laws and the entire government structure.

U. S. HEAVY CRUISER AND 2 DESTROYERS ORDERED TO LISBON

Washington, D. C., May 28 [Special].—The navy department announced tonight that the heavy cruiser Vincennes and two destroyers, the Truxtun and the Simpson, have been ordered to proceed from an Atlantic coast port to Lisbon, Portugal, to join squadron 40-T.

This squadron has been maintained in neutral European waters since the outbreak of the war for the protection of American interests. It was stated that the ships would not convoy any merchant vessels.

Squadron 40-T as now stationed at Lisbon, is composed of the Trenton, a light cruiser, and the Herbert and the Dickinson, destroyers.

Pay Without Pay.

Mr. Roosevelt announced that the defense coördinators will hold their first meeting here Thursday in the White House with him. Thereafter they will meet every Friday.

The members of the body will serve without pay, but will receive an expense allowance. He said Stettinius and Knudsen will have full time jobs; Hillman almost a full time job, and the rest part time jobs at present.

The commission was named under authority given the President by the National Defense act of 1916.

ENGLISH URGED TO WAIT BEFORE JUDGING LEOPOLD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 28.—While the capitulation of King Leopold of Belgium was being condemned by Londoners as treasonous, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes who, as a special British liaison officer, was with the Belgian monarch until late Monday night, tonight appealed to the public and parliament to suspend judgment on Leopold until all the facts are known. He described the king as a "very gallant soldier."

Peril Forces Army's Flight, Britain Told

LONDON, May 28 (AP).—Withdrawal of the British expeditionary forces from positions now occupied will be necessary because of the "great peril" in which the army stands, the British minister of information, Alfred Duff Cooper, declared tonight in a broadcast to an anxious Britain.

"The enemy have succeeded in forcing their way thru the lines of the allies and they have reached the sea," Duff Cooper said, "but the armies of the allies have not been defeated and whenever we have met the enemy, whether on land, on the sea, or in the air, we have proved our superiority.

"It will be necessary to do our utmost to withdraw our army from the positions that they now occupy. It will not be a defeated army that we shall withdraw.

Army's "Courage High."

"It will be an army whose courage is still high and whose confidence is still unshaken and in which every officer and man is still burning with desire to meet the enemy in combat.

"Final victory can still be ours. We have not lost the war tonight and assuredly we shall not lose it."

He declared that whatever the blow that may fall, the British people have known dark days before and have come back to final victory. He recalled the dark days of the last war.

Tribute to Belgians.

Duff Cooper declared the Belgian army was no longer able to continue, but had fought bravely.

"This is no time for criticism and incrimination," he added. "We have other things to think of."

He warned against the "most insidious propaganda" thru which, he said, Germany attempted to persuade the French to blame the British and the British to blame the French. Any one who said that "the French have let us down" was either a "paid agent of Germany or an unpaid one," he stated.

Society of Friends Told to Love 'Even Adolf Hitler'

Burlington, N. J., May 28 [Special].—The Society of Friends, at a meeting today, were told to "love even Adolf Hitler." The speaker was C. Reed Carey of Germantown, Pa., member of the board of directors of the American Friends Service committee.

BRITISH HOPES OF SAVING ARMY IN TRAP FADING

LONDON, May 28 (AP).—As a result of the Belgians giving way, the peril of the British expeditionary force in Belgium has reached a gravity not even exceeded by that of the British in the disaster at Gallipoli in the world war.

The chances of extricating the B. E. F. from the Germans' slowly tightening ring of steel have been seriously lessened because the Belgians, who held the left wing of the allies' front, have quit fighting.

The odyssey of the British expeditionary force, which was begun with an almost joyous advance into Belgium when the Belgians and Dutch called for aid, now is wound up in a narrow ellipse surrounded by Germans and hammered by bombers and strafers.

Face Annihilation.

After continued withdrawals, the situation which confronted the British army this morning was this:

In company with some French and Belgian troops they held a shelf of land from Maulde to Audenarde, a line running from 10 miles northwest of Valenciennes to 15 miles south of Ghent. They were under fierce German attack.

To the south lay Arras and the edge of the gap thru which the Germans were pouring infantry and artillery in support of their mechanized columns, who were slashing at the rear of the British forces.

General Attack Near.

Tonight Lord Gort, commander of the B. E. F., and his army lay inside a ring of German steel that was pressing toward the center with scores of attacks by mechanized forces, all preparing the way for a general attack aimed at annihilation.

Britain's plans to extricate the army from its predicament were the secret of Prime Minister Winston Churchill and his war council. Churchill told the house of commons today the trapped thousands had and would have "the powerful assistance of the royal navy and the air force."

Flyers Bomb Germans.

Claiming destruction or damage of 22 German planes, a British air ministry communique said R. A. F. fighters and bombers "have been doing their utmost" to relieve German pressure.

Bombers also blasted again at military objectives in Dusseldorf, Dortmund, Duisburg, Hamburg, and Cologne, Germany. Naval flyers struck at German positions on the French and Belgian coasts.

The admiralty announced German bombers sank the naval trawlers Melbourne and Cape Passaro, on which four lives were lost.

British Flyers Back Offensive with Big Raids

(Maps on back page.)

PARIS, May 28 (AP).—A great, desperate offensive from the south to relieve the northern allied armies—left with the back of their resistance broken by the surrender of the Belgian army "almost in its entirety"—was declared tonight by the French to be "developing favorably" for their army.

This fighting was in the region of the Somme river. To the east 30 other allied divisions of some 450,000 to 640,000 men were poised for a synchronized attack along the Aisne river. Upon the outcome of these supreme efforts will depend the result of the desperately contested battle of Flanders. The Somme and Aisne front extends for more than 200 miles.

In coöperation with the Somme offensive, British and French air forces put everything they had into a far-flung bombing operation over German air fields and communications.

Difficult in the North.

To the north, where about 300,000 Belgians were gravely acknowledged by the French to have become voluntary Nazi prisoners almost to a man, it was admitted that the situation was "very difficult," but the night French communique declared that the hard-pressed allies were "still fighting with the same determination."

In this area, the Germans, finding the resistance suddenly far lessened, apparently were swinging their northern wing like a great gate to the coastline of the English channel, thus supporting the considerable number of Nazi troops already on the seacoast.

The action on the Somme—on the south side of the German corridor to the sea—was officially termed "an important movement," and its details were guarded.

Attack German Convoys.

Virtually the entire allied air force, meanwhile, was thrown into the northern breach in an attempt to check the German rush thru the gap left by the Belgians. German troop convoys were the especial target of mass air attacks.

Allied Generalissimo Maxime Weygand was reported to have thrown the major part of his force into position for the supreme thrust into the lower rim of the German circle even before the Belgians laid down their arms.

The loss of the mass of the Belgian army, which had backed them almost up to their western shore, was a blow equaled only by the collapse of Gen. Andre George Corap's army in the battle of the Meuse on May 15, which permitted the Nazi motorized units to drive across northern France to the English channel.

Trapped Men Carry On.

The French and British remnants of Gen. Georges Blanchard's northern army carried on the fight in Flanders above the German salient which reaches to the sea.

Thus the outcome of the war now turned on the central front, below the broadened Nazi corridor, along the Somme and Aisne rivers and down the main Maginot fortifications to the east.

Neutral observers believed that if Gen. Weygand found he had time he would strike within the next 36 hours. The blow was expected to come midway between Rethel and Montmedy on the Aisne. These sources said he must strike now or lose not only his trapped divisions but risk the shock of a German thrust in the Rethel area, which might cut behind the Maginot line to Rheims and Paris.

NAZI FREIGHTER QUITS BRAZIL IN ATTEMPT TO RUN ALLIED BLOCKADE

BELEM, Brazil, May 28 (AP).—The German freighter Koenigsberg, 6,466 tons, sailed today, her commander declaring he believed that if he could get on the high seas he could take his ship with its $800,000 cargo of rubber thru the allied blockade.

Naval circles wondered whether the Koenigsberg's commander considered he had a better chance of getting thru to Germany now that the Dutch and much of the Norwegian coast is held by the Germans and the English channel threatened.

On Feb. 8 the freighter sailed in an attempt to run the blockade but returned eight days later. Eight German vessels still remain in Brazilian ports.

ENEMY MORALE NEAR CRACKUP, BERLIN INSISTS

BULLETIN.

BERLIN, May 29, Wednesday (AP).—German bombers were reported today to be subjecting the allied armies of the north to a terrific battering and military commentators said the pocketed troops must "surrender or die" within the next few days.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
(Maps on back page.)

BERLIN, May 28.—With the removal of the Belgians, following the surrender of at least 300,000 troops, as an obstacle to their blitzkrieg, many Germans were convinced tonight that Fuehrer Hitler's next move will be against Paris—"to increase the panic in France," it was said.

This conviction was based on the belief here that the morale of the population in France is nearer the breaking point than in England.

"Our next drive might be directed toward London or our armies might push toward Paris. The chances are even."

Belittle Counterattacks.

But they were emphatic in saying that with the surrender of the Belgians, the German armies henceforth will concentrate on the annihilation of England and France, whom they describe as "war guilt criminals."

[Tho a German official statement said the Belgian surrender affected units comprising nearly half a million men, allied sources and military observers believed 300,000 was more nearly the correct figure.

Germans declared that the attempts of Gen. Maxime Weygand, allied commander in chief, to relieve the 700,000 British and French troops trapped in Belgium and northern France are "half-hearted and too weak and unsystematic to promise any success."

Repulse Some Attacks.

The French counterattacks, the Germans said, were made on the lower Somme river and at Carignan, southwest of Sedan. On the Somme the French attacked with tanks. The Germans reported that in repelling the attack, 30 French tanks were destroyed.

The French Somme-Aisne front begins at the mouth of the Somme and extends eastward over Abbeville, Amiens, Peronne, and Hammeen; southward between La Fere and Chauny to the Oise river and the Aisne canal, following the latter to the junction with the Aisne river.

The front then follows the Aisne over Rethel to Amagne, then due east to Lechesne, Stenay, Montmedy, and Longwy to the Luxemburg border at the northern end of the Maginot line.

Claim Foes Desperate.

The position of the British and French troops in the northern trap was regarded by the Germans as desperate, and military sources believed that what they called the "biggest encirclement battle in world history" was rapidly nearing its end.

The enemy forces, under the French general, Georges Blanchard, are pressed into a narrow pocket extending from a base on about 50 miles of seacoast to an apex at St. Armand, less than 20 miles east of Lille, textile and industrial city of 200,000 population, which is the seventh largest city of France.

The fortress of Lille is being attacked from the air and by ground forces pounding from the west, south, and east. And with the Belgian capitulation the Germans now are able to cut off an allied retreat from Lille to the north.

The Germans declare that the élite of the French army, or practically all of their fully motorized divisions, are trapped in the Lille sector beyond all hope of escaping.

They point out that approaches to the allied supply port of Dunkirk are open to the German forces from the North sea and on land from the north. The Belgian army had held a sector stretching from west of Ostend to Bruges and from Ostend southward to north of Ypres.

Southeast of Lille and north of Valenciennes, the Germans reported they have broken thru the strong French fortifications of the Belgian-French border. West of Valenciennes German troops crossed the Scheldt canal and seized Orchies and Douai. After these operations, German forces were said to be 20 miles west and 13 miles southeast of Lille.

Move Closer to Dunkirk.

Advancing along the English channel coast, from Gravelines, the Germans seized Bourbourg, some 10 miles southwest of Dunkirk. Along the southern line of the pocket, the Germans occupied Hazebrouck, Merville, and La Bassee.

From just east of Zeebrugge, Belgium, southward six miles east of Bruges and Thourout to just east of Roselare; then sharply west close to Ypres, eastward again to Menin, then south just east of Tourcoing and Roubaix to St. Armand and the Scheldt canal.

From there the line passes over Orchies, La Bassee, Merville, Hazebrouck, Bourbourg, and to the channel coast immediately east of Gravelines.

Germans Admit Losses.

Authoritative German sources said tonight that naturally German losses have been heavy in the drive against the northern allied army in Flanders and northern France, but that these were considered worthwhile in view of the gains made. The losses mostly were among infantry troops.

A German military spokesman testifying to the intensity of the struggle said that the "combat during the last few days has grown extraordinarily bitter. The enemy offered furious resistance so that we must expect corresponding losses also on our side."

Meanwhile it seemed likely, from information available here, that the allies have been able to withdraw many of their forces from the pocket, transporting them by sea behind the French "river front" along the Somme and the Aisne and perhaps partly also to strengthen the British home defense.

A fully loaded transport vessel of 3,000 tons was stated to have been torpedoed and sunk by a speedboat off the Belgian coast.

Nazis Count Their Gains.

The Germans reported that in yesterday's combats on all fronts 63 allied planes were shot down. Twenty-eight other allied planes, the Germans said, were destroyed on the ground or shot down by anti-aircraft guns. The Germans admitted the loss of 23 planes.

As the Nazis look back on the last nine months they record a long streak of victories:

The conquest of Holland in five days.

The capitulation of the king of the Belgians in 18 days after the German invasion of Belgium started.

The almost complete conquest of Norway—the only country not fully subjugated, where King Haakon and his men still are offering stubborn resistance near Narvik.

The encirclement of France's crack troops and the British expeditionary forces on the Franco-Belgian border, and Last, but not least, the conquest of the channel ports as ideal bases for operations against England.

Consequently the Nazis are convinced that it is only a matter of a few weeks until victory is theirs completely. Already they are beginning to discuss how Europe will be reorganized "according to the Fuehrer's wishes." They describe it as the United States of Europe under German "guidance," and the borders of Europe will be reshuffled to suit the Nazi wishes.

Italians in Berlin, when asked tonight whether their country will join the war against England and France, shrugged their shoulders and said:

"We feel sure we are going to fight somebody some place soon."

Despite the energetic speeches of French Premier Paul Reynaud and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, political circles in Berlin believed these countries are "ripe for a revolution."

The German radio is doing its best to stir up the French population and army, calling upon the soldiers "not to sacrifice their lives for nothing," saying "you cannot win."

To the Berlin populace the Belgian capitulation was one of the most cheering events of the war.

Text of Hitler Statement.

"The king of the Belgians, in order to put an end to further bloodshed and the wholly purposeless destruction of his country, has arrived at a decision to lay down arms, contrary to the wish of the majority of his government.

"This government, which is chiefly responsible for the catastrophe which befell Belgium, now also seems willing further to remain in the company of their English-French employers.

"The Fuehrer has ordered that the king of the Belgians and his army be accorded such consideration as due bravely fighting soldiers.

"Since the king of the Belgians personally expressed no wish, a Belgian castle has been designated him for a temporary sojourn until a definite domicile is determined.

"The total number of Belgian units affected by the capitulation may roughly comprise half a million men.

How Germans Encircled Allied Army

Busy Churchill Finally Moves to Downing Street

LONDON, May 28 (AP).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill took up residence at 10 Downing street today. Strenuous war duties since he became premier on May 10 had delayed his moving.

FRENCH LAUNCH DRIVE TO RESCUE TRAPPED FORCES

Attack on Somme River; Claim Successes.

was broken to the French by Premier Reynaud in a radio broadcast after a solemn night of sessions of both the French and Belgian cabinets.

The Belgian army had 18 divisions at the beginning of the campaign and it was estimated 15 of them surrendered.

But there was no sign of any weakening in the allied determination to carry the war on the new front.

The allied armies still fighting in the north consisted [here three words were censored] of the British expeditionary force and several French divisions which rushed into Belgium on May 10 at the start of the German invasion.

They started retreating on May 15 with the Belgians covering their northern flank in a vain effort to form a junction with the central French army on the Somme.

Smash Toward Lille.

The Germans turned their offensive against the northern armies in a smashing campaign to occupy the important French industrial region around Lille, take command of the English channel and free their full forces for a final drive.

At the moment of the Belgian surrender the allied still held much of Flanders and the coast on a line south from Belgium thru Menin to Douai and west thru St. Omer to Calais. Within that pocket they held the port of Dunkirk, France, thru which supplies had been flowing to the trapped troops.

Dunkirk and the Belgian ports above it, among them Ostend and Zeebrugge, now are left shorn of effective defense. The German armies now are pushing toward Ostend and Zeebrugge.

Despite its disastrous turn, the northern campaign served one important end for the allies. It gave them time to take their stand on the new 200 mile front on the Somme and Aisne rivers and the Maginot line.

Report Repulse on Meuse.

While the northern armies were engaged in their death struggle the central French forces mopped up on the Somme, freeing the south bank of the river from its mouth to Saint Quentin, and installed a solid front farther east on the Aisne.

The Germans attacked twice during the night on the flank of the Aisne front where the Meuse valley runs south into France. They were reported repulsed.

GEN. BLANCHARD, CHIEF OF TRAPPED FORCES, IS TEACHER OF ARMY MEN

PARIS, May 28.—Gen. Georges Maurice Jean Blanchard, upon whom has fallen the task of extricating the Franco-British northern forces from the enemy's grasp in Belgium, is 63 years old. Tho born in Orleans, he is Parisian by education and associations. Blue eyed and dark haired, he has come from the artillery arm.

Gen. Blanchard. [A. P. Wirephoto.]

During the world war he was present at many important actions and almost died from the effect of poison gas. Later he was given a number of staff posts.

Before this war Gen. Blanchard was director of the center of high military studies—popularly known as the field marshals' school. He has six children—two sons serving in the army and four daughters, all married to officers.

FRANCE OUSTS 24 FOR LEAVING POSTS OF DUTY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 28.—Two French mayors of the Meuse department, eight officials of northern France, and 14 employés of the merchant marine ministry at Dieppe and Dunkirk, including two women, have been dismissed "for abandoning their posts of duty before receiving the order to do so," the Journal Officiel, government organ, stated today. Among them were the police chiefs of Lille and Valenciennes and the subprefect of St. Omer.

Thirty-six factory workers in Toulouse and 11 in Versailles failed to report for work on Sunday. They must now appear before military tribunals on the charge of having committed "acts harmful to the national defense."

A school teacher at Toulon was almost lynched by her pupils for making remarks favorable to Fuehrer Adolf Hitler. Police arrested her and found that her home was filled with Nazi tracts and objects decorated with the swastika.

DUTCH TO FIGHT ON IN SPITE OF LEOPOLD'S ACTION

LONDON, May 28 (AP).—A spokesman for the Dutch government in exile in London tonight said the capitulation of King Leopold of Belgium would make no difference in the decision of the Dutch government to continue fighting with all the forces at its disposal at the side of the allies. The government here, under Queen Wilhelmina, still directs the Dutch navy and Holland's rich possessions in the East and West Indies.

FRENCH STUNNED BY CAPITULATION OF BELGIAN KING

Put Faith in Strong Line on Somme and Aisne.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 28.—The capitulation of the Belgian army in Flanders hit the French public with the force of a thunderclap today.

The French war communique, issued just after Premier Paul Reynaud had announced by radio the news of King Leopold's capitulation, was unusually brief and merely said that the military situation had been aggravated by the Belgian decision and that the Franco-British troops were continuing to fight.

The Paris population reeled under the blow of Reynaud's announcement because the communiques had been announcing during the last couple of days that the Belgians were fighting valiantly. Many people were in tears and the news at first was incredible.

The first moment of complete astonishment and paralysis gave way later to indignation and fury. Women in the streets said, "He is not like his father."

Reassured by Weygand.

The Paris press unanimously proclaimed that King Leopold's act was treachery and that the real Belgium was betrayed by its king.

The Paris reaction tonight, however, was one of complete calm and courage.

The people felt reassured when it was announced that Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander in chief of the allied land forces, has a strong defense of the country organized from the mouth of the Somme river, along the Aisne river, and down the Maginot line. There was confidence that this line will stand like a stone wall against any new German maneuvers.

Many Refugees in France.

The Belgian situation is complicated by the facts that France is full of Belgian refugees, just how many no one knows, but probably not many less than a million.

Belgian refugees at first, did not believe the news about the Belgian army's capitulation. At the Belgian embassy armed guards barred the entrance to every one.

Many Belgian ministers are in Paris. Belgian Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak conferred with Vice Premier Marshal Henri Petain. Georges Mandel, French minister of interior, conferred with the Belgian minister of public health, Marcel Jasper, about the problem of the great numbers of Belgian refugees.

Reynaud's consultations included talks with American Ambassador William C. Bullitt, with Foreign Minister Edouard Daladier, Admiral of the Fleet Jean Darlan, and the British ambassador, Sir Ronald Hugh Campbell.

Announcement First Hint.

Reynaud at 8:30 a. m. told France that the help of the Belgians was no longer available. Frenchmen learned that since 5 a. m. [11 p. m. Monday, Chicago time] the Belgians were no longer fighting.

Most morning papers had not carried the news of last night's hurried French cabinet meeting and the broadcast therefore was unexpected. Reynaud's description of the capitulation was bitter and he asserted that the Belgians had laid down their arms without warning the French and British or Gen. Georges Blanchard, who commanded all the forces operating in the north. Reynaud asserted this was without parallel in history.

Reynaud particularly stressed that the situation was grave because the Belgian withdrawal had left Dunkirk exposed and that this French port was the gate thru which the supplies came for the armies of the north.

Reynaud said Leopold had acted against the advice of his ministers and recalled that only 18 days ago Leopold had called in the allies to help him. Reynaud assured the people that his faith in victory was still intact.

Roseville, Cal., May 28 (AP).—An ice box door that swung shut of its own weight caused the suffocation of Robert Richmond, 4 years old, and Richard Lee Payne, 8, police said today. The bodies were found yesterday after the two failed to return home for dinner.

LILAC BLOSSOMS FILL THE AIR AND GO ON AIR WAVES

W-G-N Tells of Flower Gifts to Shut-ins.

"I'd like to paint my lilacs but I'm afraid they wouldn't look as pretty," a little boy at the Jahn public school for crippled children volunteered into a W-G-N microphone yesterday. The little boy, with an eye for beauty and a flare for drawing, was one of 7,000 shut-ins in 56 institutions who received fragrant bouquets yesterday.

It was the second and last day in the 12th annual Share Your Lilacs campaign sponsored by the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild in cooperation with THE TRIBUNE. On Friday, the opening day of the observance, blooms were distributed to 16,000 patients in 96 institutions.

Four Broadcasts Tell Story.

The story of the lilacs from their rain soaked bushes to the bedsides of the sick and indigent was graphically told for the first time in four broadcasts over W-G-N yesterday morning and afternoon. The blooms arrived in large boxes, cartons, iron tubs, and damp newspapers at nine railroad terminals from 8 to 10 a. m. They had been loaded on the trains at various suburban stations by 2,000 representatives of the guild.

The flowers yesterday were in excellent condition, many of them fresh, dewy, and budding because of the previous day's rain. The total number of bouquets was less than Friday's, however, because the rain had scattered the petals of lilacs in full blossom.

Friday's contributions more than made up for the scarcity yesterday. So many bouquets were received that the big hospitals, settlement houses, and old people's homes were reached the first day. Those omitted, including schools for crippled children and smaller hospitals, were supplied yesterday. More shut-ins were given lilacs in this campaign than in any other year.

Arrivals Are Described.

Lewis Lamarr, W-G-N announcer, was on hand at 8:30 a. m. at the Union station to describe the great bunches of lavender, blue, and white lilacs which were carried off the trains by conductors, engineers, and firemen. The radio audience was told by Walter R. Emery, conductor for the Milwaukee road; R. H. McDougall, engineer, and John Eads, fireman, how hundreds of commuters, their arms filled with lilacs, had crowded the station platforms.

The Tribune Tower loading platform, where The Tribune trucks brought the flowers from the railroad stations, was the scene of the second broadcast at 10 a. m. Mark Kaplan, Tribune circulation dispatcher, and Ira Franks, Tribune truck driver who has delivered lilacs for 12 years, told of the arrangements necessary for distribution. Three girl reporters, who took the bouquets personally to hospitals Friday, related their experiences, and Homer Neisz of the Tribune staff explained the growth of the campaign.

Hospital Patients on Air.

Quin Ryan of W-G-N interviewed patients who received lilacs at the Henrotin hospital at 1 p. m. One 6 year old girl, Sally, with lilacs in her hair, spoke into the microphone. Miss Veronica Miller, superintendent of the hospital for 20 years, and Miss Mary Rosenberg, nurse of the emergency room, described the delight of the shut-ins when the flowers were taken into the sickrooms.

Several little pupils at the Jahn public school for crippled children who were questioned by Lamarr over W-G-N at 1:10 p. m. never had seen lilacs before. Their excitement was described by Mrs. M. A. Olschner, eighth grade teacher. Anna D. Lanz, principal, expressed her thanks to the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild and THE TRIBUNE for the flowers which filled every classroom with spring fragrance.

REPORT ALLIES AND NORSE SEIZE PARTS OF NARVIK

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 28 (AP).—Norwegian and allied troops tonight were reported to have occupied part of the ruined city of Narvik in a fierce attack as the Germans retreated along the iron ore railroad to Sweden, destroying everything of military value.

Swedish correspondents at the border said the Germans were concentrating their defenses near the frontier as allied and Norwegian troops, aided by gunfire from British destroyers, took over some points in the city and along Narvik fjord. Earlier it was reported that German troops landed from planes had crossed Rombak fjord in collapsible boats to attack British flanks near Narvik.

Border dispatches also said 30 German bombing planes destroyed Bodo, south of Narvik, today. No indication of casualties was given.

Town Reported Captured.

Washington, D. C., May 28.—Norwegian troops have captured Kopperfjell, 20 miles northeast of Narvik, according to wireless reports made public by the Norwegian legation today. These reports said only 250 Germans remain in Narvik, the rest having taken up positions along the railroad to Sweden.

U. S. RUSHING SHIP ABROAD TO BRING 1,800 BACK HOME

New York, May 28 (AP).—The state department asked the United States Lines today to rush the liner Washington back to Europe to help remove Americans from war zones.

The company said the ship would sail Thursday noon, two days ahead of schedule. She arrived today with 1,068 passengers.

The state department said 301 Americans were gathered at Bordeaux, France, 70 at Lisbon, Portugal, and about 1,800 at Genoa and Naples, and the number was increasing rapidly. The Washington will stop at all four ports.

When the liner Washington arrived today from Genoa, among its 1,068 passengers were 500 Jewish refugees traveling on Swiss passports. The United States ambassador to Russia, Laurence A. Steinhardt, returned after a year in Moscow.

STUDY WARTIME DISPOSITION OF 341 AIR LINERS

Experts Agree They Can't Be Used as Bombers.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

Part of the army mobilization plans in case of a national emergency call for the commandeering of the nation's 22 commercial airlines, their personnel and equipment, including their 341 twin motored and four motored passenger planes, it was learned here yesterday. The program from that point on, however, is uncertain and will depend upon developments.

One group of army and commercial aviation officials believes that the greatest contribution the airlines could give in wartime will be to keep the arteries of transportation and mail open as usual. Another group thinks that the service should be continued but on a curtailed basis, much as the British and French have continued their own transport services in Europe.

Liners Are Not Bombers.

Both sides agree that one step not to be taken will be that of attempting to turn passenger planes into bombers. It simply cannot be done, according to engineers. The peaceful passenger plane might make a fine freighter, troop transport, or staff transport vehicle, but it will not make an efficient bomber, the experts say.

Army engineers in Washington, who refused to be quoted directly, explained that the problems involved in constructing bombardment planes and passenger planes are entirely different. They said German technicians attempted to build a compromise plane that could be either bomber or transport in the Junkers Ju-86. This was a modern, "clean" airplane with two 850 horse power motors.

American transport with motors of similar power carry from 18 to 24 passengers each. The Ju-86, with its tiny cramped cabin, could carry only 10 persons in addition to its crew. And because it had a larger fuselage than planes designed primarily as bombers its speed even without the passenger load was slow. Ultimately the Ju-86s were discarded and the Germans went back to planes designed from the drawing boards as bombers.

Load Problem of Bombers.

An important point that must be considered about bombers, one well informed engineer said, is the fact that a bomber's load must be carried in a concentrated form. And the bomber must be designed so that its flying characteristics are about the same whether it is carrying a concentrated load of bombs, a half a load, or none at all.

On the other hand, a transport plane carries its load distributed thru the entire cabin. It is designed to fly with this load extending from the nose back almost to the tail. The sudden dropping of part of the load [in the form of bombs perhaps] might change the flying characteristic entirely. There are many structural requirements for each type that are peculiar to the job for which the planes are intended.

"We've gone into the question deeply," said one of these men. "It's much better to build your bomber as a bomber from the time you make your first drawings. Take the flying fortress B-17s for example.

War Planes Need Speed.

"The bomber has a top speed of 270 miles an hour and range of 2,500 miles. It was first built in 1933. It took the Boeing company five years to use virtually the same wing but build an entirely new fuselage or hull and redesign the entire plane so that it now becomes the Boeing Stratoliner and is just going into commercial service.

"Meanwhile the army has had dozens of new types of bombers. It just doesn't pay. It would be extremely costly and a slow process."

Experts also pointed out that the commercial air line fleet of 341 airplanes comprises a number of different types. There are Lockheed Electras, Lodestars, Zephyrs, and 12s; Douglas DC-2s and DC-3s, and Boeing 274-D airplanes in the group. None of them has the performance needed from a modern bomber that must have a top speed of nearly 300 miles an hour.

Fastest planes in the group are the new Stratoliners that have a high speed of 242 miles an hour at 18,000 feet.

ROSEMARY KENNEDY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 28.—One thousand Americans, eager to return home, will be left in Britain and Ireland when the United States liner President Roosevelt, sent to repatriate American citizens from the war danger zone, sails from Ireland for New York.

Rosemary Kennedy, 21 years old, eldest daughter of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, is returning to the United States by air because of the demand for space on the liner. She flew from here to Lisbon today to catch the transoceanic plane.

The liner, which is due in Galway, Ireland, on Friday, accommodates 1,000 passengers and every berth has been booked. It is estimated 1,000 more of the 5,000 Americans in Britain and Ireland want to go home. Many applications for passage have been turned down.

United States Lines officials said today they had no information whether any other ship would follow the President Roosevelt or whether the liner would make a return trip.

POPE RECEIVES ALFONSO WITH A KING'S HONORS

ROME, May 28.—The Vatican demonstrated today that for diplomatic purposes it still considers King Alfonso XIII, king of Spain. The former monarch had a private audience with the pope at noon, and on his arrival he was received with the honors due to this rank. Later the king visited Cardinal Luigi Maglione, papal secretary of state. It is not known if there was any political significance behind the visits, which come at a time when Spain and Italy are supposed to be collaborating closely.

In Roman society King Alfonso is always addressed as "Sire," or "Your Majesty," and the newspapers invariably refer to him as "King Alfonso XIII. of Spain," as if he still possessed his throne.

Italian Threat Trims Value of U. S. Checks at Budapest

BUDAPEST, Hungary, May 28 (AP).—Checks on American banks were worth only 70 per cent of their face value today because of the strengthening conviction that Italy will enter the war soon, shutting off normal communication between central Europe and the United States. Banks feared they would shortly find it hard to get the checks back to New York for payment.

DIES AFTER FALL FROM TRAIN.

Robert Lane, 28 years old, 4524 Oakenwald avenue, died in St. Anthony's hospital at Rockford yesterday of injuries incurred Thursday when he fell from a freight train on which he had been riding.

FORD ASSERTS HE CAN BUILD 1,000 AIRPLANES A DAY

But He Would Insist: No Government Meddling.

Detroit, Mich., May 28 (AP).—Henry Ford, life-long opponent of war in any form, said today that, much as he hated war, "if it became necessary the Ford Motor company could—with the counsel of men like Lindbergh and Rickenbacker, under our own supervision and without meddling by government agencies—swing into the production of a thousand airplanes of standard design a day."

It would take about six months under those conditions, he said in an interview, to reach that level of production.

"Of course," he emphasized, "the planes would have to be of standard design; equally important would be freedom of action on our own part, so that we would not have the handicaps of red tape that slowed down production during the world war."

Envisions Slash in Cost.

Ford said that not only would the 1,000 planes a day be possible, but that their cost also "could be reduced to one-eighth of what they now sell for."

Ford said he is convinced the present war in Europe will not last very long "because the United States won't get into it."

"Don't misunderstand me," he said. "A lot of pressure is being brought to push us into it and there is real danger in enormous defensive armament, but I am confident we can keep out of it."

It was suggested to Ford that "a thousand planes a day is an enormous volume of production."

"So was 10,000 motorcars a day," he said, "but we did it; so was the production of one eagle boat a day during the world war, but we did it.

Recalls Previous Red Tape.

"Incidentally, we would have reached the level of one submarine chaser a day much sooner but for a certain amount of red tape that had to be contended with."

"Still, planes present a different problem," the interviewer persisted.

"How?" Ford asked.

"Well, we don't know as much about planes as we do about motorcars and farm tractors."

"That's exactly why I say we need the counsel of men who know aviation and that we must not be dictated to by men who haven't kept up to date in airplane design and operation," came the reply. "The manufacture of airplanes—if agreement is had upon just what is wanted—becomes simply an assembly problem."

U. S. AIDS FLEE THRU WAR ZONE TO SWITZERLAND

BERNE, Switzerland, May 28 (AP).—The American consul at Calais, France, and two American customs attachés reached Switzerland today after a week's flight thru the war zone in two battered automobiles.

James G. Carter, one of the few Negroes to attain consular rank in the American foreign service, left Calais last Tuesday after the city had been bombed repeatedly by German planes. Following him were Carl Morgen Richards and Charles Schlager.

They reached Abbeville Wednesday afternoon just as the battle broke there. Thursday, in the midst of the German advance forces, they were given special passes back thru the lines. Then they were escorted thru Arras, across Luxemburg, into Germany, and thence into Switzerland.

BELGIUM, ITS SIXTH VICTIM, FALLS TO NAZI BLITZKRIEG IN 18 DAYS

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Surrender of the Belgian army yesterday at King Leopold III.'s order came 18 days after the start of the German invasion.

Adolf Hitler's blitzkrieg legions thus added their sixth conquest in the campaigns in which his forces swept over Poland in less than four weeks; took Denmark without a struggle, and forced capitulation of the Netherlands in five days.

Fighting has continued in northern Norway since the German invasion of April 9, altho the Nazis have held southern Norway virtually since then.

The record of conquest:

POLAND—Charges invasion Sept. 1, 1939, after several days of border fighting, and calls on Britain to fulfill assistance pact; Germany announces fall of Warsaw Sept. 27, and capitulation of Hela, "last center of military resistance," Oct. 1; no capitulation by national government, which withdrew to France; former President Ignace Moscicki in Switzerland after temporary internment in Rumania.

DENMARK—Invaded and occupied in a day, April 9, 1940; no organized resistance; King Christian remains in Denmark.

NORWAY—Invaded April 9; no capitulation; southern and central Norway virtually abandoned to Germans by May 3, when allied troops quit Namsos; resistance continues in north, where King Haakon remains with his government.

LUXEMBURG—Invaded and occupied in a day, May 10; no organized resistance; Grand Duchess Charlotte and her family flee to Paris.

NETHERLANDS—Invaded May 10; commander in chief capitulated May 14 for all, but tiny Zeeland province; Queen Wilhelmina remains in England, where she fled before surrender.

BELGIUM—Invaded May 10; capitulation by King Leopold, somewhere in Belgium, May 28.

British Plan Chest Armor to Be Donned by Soldiers

LONDON, May 28 (AP).—R. K. Law, financial secretary for the war office, told the house of commons today experiments were being made on a protective chest armor for British troops. "Rumors that light armor is being worn by the Germans are unconfirmed," he said.

300,000 TROOPS LAY DOWN ARMS AS BELGIANS QUIT

Cabinet Disowns King; Acts to Reform Army.

PARIS, May 28 (AP).—A war ministry spokesman said tonight the Belgian army, "almost in its entirety," has given itself up to the Germans and that its soldiers had become prisoners. The situation, as a result of the capitulation of King Leopold III. of the Belgians, was said to be "very difficult" for the allies. The spokesman placed the number surrendering at 300,000.

Premier Hubert Pierlot

Leopold himself was commander in chief of the Belgian army. His order to lay down arms in unconditional surrender ended the resistance of the great body of his forces, which had covered the left flank of the allied army of the north which now faces encirclement.

Country Is Divided.

The Belgian senate and chamber tonight approved the action of the Belgian cabinet which earlier today disowned King Leopold and decided to continue the fight on the side of the allies. Officers of the two houses declared their solidarity with the government and their will to continue the fight until victory.

It was one of the strangest hours in Belgium's history, with the country separated in two parts—the cabinet, legislature, and thousands of refugees in France and England still at war with Germany, and millions of Belgians and soldiers and their king remaining in their German occupied homeland.

Belgian leaders said they would lay charges against the monarch, who is 38 years old.

To Reorganize Army.

The decision to disown the king was reached at a meeting last night.

Addressing the Belgian nation in his broadcast repudiating the king's action, Belgian Premier Hubert Pierlot said:

"The king has broken the constitution and placed himself under the power of the invader. Consequently he is no longer able to govern. Officials, state leaders, and officers are, therefore, relieved from the allegiance imposed on them by their oath of security. Among the brave young Belgians who have responded to the appeal of the government in France and Great Britain a new army will be organized."

Belgium Holds Mandate.

The Belgian Congo, an area of about 902,000 square miles with a native population of more than 10,000,000 and a white population of about 24,000, is the nation's chief overseas possession.

Belgium holds also a league of nations mandate over Ruanda and Urandi, districts formerly in German East Africa.

[An unverified report circulated in Berlin was that the Belgian government in Paris offered to place Belgian colonies under the protection of France. It was said that London and Paris were negotiating on this point.]

King Leopold's daughter and two sons were reported safe in a château somewhere in France. The children are Princess Josephine Charlotte, 12; Prince Baudouin, 9, and Prince Albert, 5.

ROYAL TRAGEDY: RISE AND FALL OF BELGIAN KING

"A Moody, Lonely Man in War's Web.

Leopold III., who as king of the Belgians yesterday ordered the surrender of his army of 300,000 men, ascended the throne six years ago. A shy, democratic, studious man who knew the ways of all the ants and butterflies, but knew little, it was thought, about the affairs of his country, then in a precarious position.

King Albert.

From the outset he amazed his ministers by his diplomatic finesse, his knowledge of his people, and his will. Often he disagreed with them. Once, in March, 1939, he even dissolved his parliament and called for new elections, asserting it was puppeteering him.

An Undertone of Tragedy.

From the outset, too, his reign has had a deep undertone of tragedy. He was catapulted into kingship at the age 31, when his father, Albert I., heroic soldier king, fell to his death from a mountain peak. A brief year and a half later Leopold's wife, Astrid, daughter of Prince Carl of Sweden, was killed in an automobile accident in Switzerland.

A lonely and moody figure, father of three small children, he soon was faced with the burning hatreds brewing near every frontier of his little kingdom. All Europe was arming. Even Belgium. A month before he became king the first new Belgian fortifications had been completed. The problem confronting him was whether neutrality would protect Belgium.

It had for almost a century. From 1831 until the treaty of Versailles in 1919, Belgium was a neutralized nation, but King Albert's post war policy had been one of alliance with France. This Leopold abruptly abandoned in 1936. Alarmed by Hitler's remilitarization of the Rhineland, he told his cabinet neutrality was Belgium's only refuge. He thought it was. Germany, France, and Great Britain vowed to respect it as such.

Later, as Hitler darkened more and more of Europe, the young monarch made dramatic appeals for peace on behalf of the smaller powers. Last October he addressed the United States by radio and said Belgium, if invaded, would fight "with the same conviction" as in 1914, but "with forces 10 times stronger."

Leads Army Into Action.

When the Nazi invasion came May 9 he, like his father in 1914, led his army into action. It was not his first experience in Flanders. He was only 13 and safely ensconced in England when he begged to be a soldier. He enlisted as a private, was put to work filling sandbags, and emerged a sergeant to resume his studies at Eton.

He was confident of victory at the start of the invasion. "The power of our country today is infinitely greater than in 1914," he exhorted his armies on May 11. The fight, he said, would be hard, "but no one will doubt the final result."

Leopold had an education with democracy and simplicity as its keynotes. He spoke six languages—he was the first Belgian king to make a throne speech in both Flemish and French. Often, before ascending the throne, he debated fluently in the Belgian senate, revealing a good working knowledge of colonial and social affairs. He was an excellent entomologist, something of an athlete, and received a salary of $2,760,000 a year as king.

Quezon Signs Bill to Cut Philippines' Immigration

MANILA, P. I., May 28 (AP).—President Manuel Quezon today signed the new immigration bill, sharply restricting quotas from all nations. Official protests had been voiced in Japan against the bill. The measure sets up annual quotas of 500 for each nationality. This represents sharp curtailment of immigration from Japan and China. Before becoming law it must be sent to Washington for approval of President Roosevelt, since it deals with foreign relations.

EIGHT DIE OF SPOTTED FEVER.

Cheyenne, Wyo., May 28 (AP).—Eight deaths from Rocky Mountain spotted fever have been reported unofficially in Wyoming this year, compared to six deaths from the tick borne disease in 1939 and in 1938. The disease caused 19 deaths in the state in 1937.

ROME'S CIVILIANS FILL POSTS LEFT BY ITS SOLDIERS

Belgian Defeat Heightens Clamor for War.

ROME, May 29, Wednesday (AP).—Civilians began taking over some posts left by men called to arms today, as the Belgian collapse on the northern front heightened Italy's war fervor and made active Italian intervention appear to be only a question of days.

Young Fascists served as traffic police, and helmeted women and girls of Rome were seen in uniforms astride motorcycles equipped for anti-air raid duties. Volunteers are being recruited for a parachute corps.

At the same time the Italian press indicated that any chance the French and British ever had of obtaining continued Italian nonbelligerency by relaxing their blockade probably had been lost.

Spain also returned to Italian headlines with reports of anti-English demonstrations, together with reminders that Spain might see a chance now to recover Gibraltar.

Curb British, French Exits.

The doors for unrestricted departure of British and French nationals were closed yesterday in what some observers took as another step toward war.

The exit visa requirement, clamped on in a surprise move, stopped the departure without permission from Italy or her colonies of citizens of any countries which impose similar restrictions on Italians. That applied to French, British, and Egyptians.

British and French who sought information about the length of time required before they could obtain visas were informed those details were not yet available.

There was no immediate comment from the government on King Leopold's surrender of the Belgian army. However, Virginio Gayda wrote in the Giornale D'Italia that the surrender was "an act of high political and humane wisdom." He said the British had planned to use the Belgian army to cover their withdrawal from Flanders.

Duce's Influence Suspected.

There was speculation as to whether Premier Mussolini might have influenced King Leopold's surrender thru King Vittorio Emanuele of Italy. The king is the father-in-law of Princess Maria Jose, sister of Leopold and wife of Italian Crown Prince Umberto.

Some observers suggested that Italy might be holding off entry into the war to see what effect the Belgian surrender would have on the British and French defense.

It was considered likely that Pope Pius XII. discussed Italy's imminent action yesterday with Babuscio Rizzo, counselor of the Italian embassy at the Vatican, in a private talk preliminary to an audience today when Bernardo Attolico is to present his credentials as the new ambassador.

Italians privately and in government circles have expressed curiosity recently as to what effect Italian intervention in the war would have in the United States.

Developments around the Mediterranean, which Italians call "Mare Nostrum"—our sea—also were followed intently.

There was considerable attention given to Britain's sending of Sir Samuel Hoare to Madrid as new British ambassador with a "special mission." Some said this mission might be to persuade Gen. Francisco Franco to remain neutral in the event of an attack on Gibraltar.

Influence Suspected

BELGIAN ENVOY IN U. S. TO STICK WITH DEFENDERS

Washington, D. C., May 28 [Special].—Count Robert Van Der Straten-Ponthoz, the Belgian ambassador, aligned himself with the Belgian government in Paris today to carry on the war against Germany. Indications were that the United States would continue to recognize him, as it does several of his colleagues whose countries have been taken over by Germany.

Official confirmation of the surrender by King Leopold was given to the state department this afternoon by the ambassador. John Cudahy, United States ambassador to Belgium, plans to remain in Brussels. News of the surrender was received by President Roosevelt with sadness when he awakened at 8:30 a. m. It was telephoned by Ambassador William C. Bullitt in Paris.

AMERICAN LINER BRINGS 130 BACK FROM WAR ZONE

Boston, Mass., May 28 (AP).—Tales of turmoil in Europe were told today by 130 passengers aboard the American export liner Exeter as it docked here with the ashes of Capt. Robert M. Losey, U. S. A., who was killed in the bombing of Dombas, Norway.

Capt. Losey, military attaché of the American ministry in Stockholm, was one of the first United States citizens to lose his life in the war.

In a Word, the President Just Discombobolated 'Em

Washington, D. C., May 28 (AP).—President Roosevelt sprang a word on reporters which they could not find in the dictionary. Discussing his defense setup, the President said the government is not going to discombobolate or upset the normal habits of the country any more than can be helped.

TRIBUNE WRITER FLIES TO LISBON IN RECORD TIME

Murchie Tells of Ocean Hop Aboard Clipper.

BY GUY MURCHIE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LISBON, Portugal, May 20 [By air mail].—This is the story of a record-breaking flight to Europe on the Atlantic Clipper with a new foreign correspondent of THE TRIBUNE as a passenger. The time from North Beach airport, New York, to Lisbon was 20 hours and 40 minutes, including a brief stop for fuel at Horta, in the Azores.

Like a fat silver goose the great winged boat splashed and thundered into the air off North Beach at 2:30 p. m. last Sunday. American flags were painted on her sides and back. She bounced her 40 tons off the little waves of Long Island sound, shifting her weight from the water to her 160 foot spread of wings and pointed toward the east. Her first stop lay deep over the horizon.

13 Aboard Big Plane.

The Clipper bore 13 passengers. They gave more than a hint of the war that still seemed so far away. Among them were a young Englishman hurrying to enlist in the British army, an American girl bound for Paris to broadcast war news to America, Gen. Josef Haller returning to command the Polish army in France, his counselor, Janusz Stamirowski, and this correspondent.

More than a ton of mail lay in the Clipper's hold, taking the place of many passengers, including some who have been waiting for their chance to fly since February. Mail takes precedence over passengers, and sometimes all passengers must be left behind because of the burden of mail.

With the suddenness of being sent abroad, my own passage on the Clipper was naturally in doubt until the last few minutes. Hearing that hundreds were on the waiting list, I tried desperately to persuade the postoffice department to mail me to Europe, thus to obtain precedence over passengers. I was told that postal regulations permit no living creatures to be mailed except lizards, fish, squirrels, and other small animals weighing under four and one-half pounds.

Another Effort Misses.

Next I found a Belgian shoe manufacturer who had obtained Clipper passage. He was frantic to rescue his valuable lasts in Belgium. I offered to go after his lasts for him in return for his ticket, but he would not listen to that.

In the final half hour, by drastically reducing the quantity of my luggage, I persuaded Pan-American officials to let me fly. I had been forced to eliminate virtually all clothes, but luckily was able to keep my camera.

It seemed fantastic that we were in reality crossing the Atlantic, spreading as smooth as a mill pond two miles below. One woman passenger had never seen an airplane at close range. All the passengers were enthralled by the adventure. Strangers became fond friends. Flying steadily eastward at better than 150 miles an hour, the four great engines roared perpetually above us on the wings. The windows vibrated, and stewards passed magazines and coffee and made up berths for the night.

Watches Are Set Ahead.

As the afternoon changed to evening sooner than expected, watches had to be set ahead frequently. "You must sleep fast tonight," warned a steward as the sun sank. "We'll be in Horta in 5½ hours." A good-night toast was drunk by all passengers in champagne donated by a Swiss passenger hurrying to his threatened home in the Alps.

Dawn came in pink and lavender as we flew above clouds that looked like an arctic eternity. We were at 11,000 feet on the breath of a strong tail wind that the skipper said was giving us the fastest Atlantic Clipper time yet produced.

Horta was unsuspected until suddenly a mountain top swooped past our port windows, its cone jutting like a German helmet above the stratocumulus cloud blanket. We glided thru fluffy clouds to land before a little Portuguese town sprawling against a green mountainside patched with farm lands. The houses were like frosted cakes of pink, and green, and yellow, their dainty blinds and railings and cupolas and red mossy tiles now brilliant in a shaft of sunlight, now mellow in fleeting shade.

Onward to Lisbon.

A squat tanker trimmed in Portuguese buff and red chugged to refuel us, and we were in the air again in 20 minutes. As we thundered over the cloud flecked sea for the last few hours to Lisbon, we looked downward in the hope of seeing one of the British or French convoys that frequently ply northward in these waters, zigzagging irregularly to confuse possible enemy submarines.

Portugal appeared as a string of beautiful crescent beaches and sunny villages. We glided into Lisbon harbor among Swedish and American destroyers, and Portuguese sloops with red and brown sails. New oil refineries and tanks stood on the hillside near the Clipper dock. In the customs building dusky, black-eyed taxi drivers and hotel agents solicited the passengers. There was much interest among the Portuguese natives in the latest war news, with sentiment in favor of the allies. Portuguese religion makes sympathy with the pagan Nazis difficult here. There is talk about the considerable number of Germans in Lisbon and rumors of fifth column activity, but without available facts to support them.

LA FAYETTE SQUADRON VETS CALL SPEECH BY LINDBERGH AN INSULT

PARIS, May 28.—The Trench and Air Association of American Volunteer Combatants in the French Army, 1914 to 1918, today issued the following communication calling Col. Charles Lindbergh to account for his recent radio speech in the United States:

"In a moment of enthusiasm, mistaken but understandable, the title of honorary member of the La Fayette escadrille was conferred on Col. Charles Lindbergh after his crossing of the Atlantic in May, 1927.

"Following the speech he made last Sunday, a speech most definitely opposed to the spirit which inspired the American volunteers of the La Fayette escadrille and the Foreign Legion, who rushed to the defense of France in 1914, the Trench and Air Association of American Volunteer Combatants in the French Army, 1914 to 1918, representing in Paris the former pilots of the La Fayette escadrille, have decided to withdraw from Charles Lindbergh the title of honorary member of that famous squadron. They believe his words are an insult to the men, their comrades who fell on the field of honor and who rest in the crypt of the La Fayette escadrille monument at Garches."

PARLEY OPENED ON MILK DRIVER WAGE CONTRACT

Representatives of dairy companies and the milk wagon drivers' union opened negotiations yesterday in the Stevens hotel on disputed points in the proposed drivers' working contract. Meanwhile the drivers, operating under a truce which ended the milk strike Sunday, reported milk deliveries were being made on a pre-strike basis.

Drivers and dairy representatives discussed the old contract and union demands with Leslie G. Goudie, president of the Teamsters' Joint council.

Paul Potter, executive secretary of the Associated Milk Dealers, Inc., said the parties were getting closer on some disputed points but expressed little hope of an early settlement. Dealers' representatives will meet today with inside dairy workers, also a party to the strike, in the Associated Milk Dealers' offices at 309 Jackson boulevard.

Demand Trotsky Be Ousted as a Menace to Mexico

MEXICO CITY, May 28 (AP).—Expulsion of Leon Trotsky, exiled Russian communist leader, was sought today by the Nationalist association, a conservative political organization, and by the National Youth confederation. They asserted that his presence constituted a "constant danger" for the nation. An attempt to slay Trotsky and his wife was made last Saturday when attackers, using machine guns, fired into his suburban villa. Neither Trotsky nor his wife were hit.

U. S. to Make Aerial Photos of Coast Near Panama Canal

BOGOTA, Colombia, May 28 (AP).—The Colombian government tonight announced it had agreed to a request for the United States aircraft tender Sandpiper to remain at the port of Tumaco during June to make aerial photographs of the northern coast of Ecuador. The request was concurred in by the Ecuadorean government. Knowledge of the coast would be valuable in defense of the Panama canal.

IRISH POLITICAL PARTIES UNITE TO DEFEND NATION

Foes Support Premier Against Aggression.

DUBLIN, Ireland, May 28 (AP).—The Fianna Fail and Fine Gael, government and opposition parties, respectively, coalesced tonight on a policy of national defense.

Agreement to unite against any aggression came after Premier Eamon de Valera had warned parliament of the dangers confronting the country.

The Labor party joined the Fine Gael in agreeing to De Valera's proposal that both opposition groups appoint representatives for weekly conferences on international matters and national defense. The government will be represented by two members, the Fine Gael, the principal opposition, by three, and Labor by two at the conferences.

"Dangers threatening the country now are obvious," De Valera said. He declared Ireland "really is in the war zone" and should plan her defenses accordingly.

Seeks Thousands of Troops.

De Valera today also announced an immediate campaign to add thousands of troops to Ireland's armed forces. He said reserves of the regular army and first line volunteers were being called.

Opposition Leader William T. Cosgrave, answering De Valera's appeal for a coalition government, said the Fine Gael was alive to Ireland's peril and was willing to accept its full share of responsibility for policies on which there has been consultation and agreement.

Labor Leader William Norton said his followers were in wholehearted agreement.

As the defense campaign took on new impetus, it was revealed that 12 persons suspected of "fifth column" tendencies have been seized since Sunday in the mountains surrounding Dublin. Seven still are in custody. One alien of undisclosed nationality was among those detained.

Irish-British Troop Unity Urged.

LONDON, May 28 (AP).—Military coöperation between British and Irish troops was urged in the house of commons today by Sir William Davison and the Rev. James Little.

Davison asked Clement Attlee, lord privy seal and Prime Minister Winston Churchill's lieutenant in commons, whether he knew that Irish Premier Eamon De Valera had said Ireland now was within the war zone. Attlee, however, did not discuss the Irish situation.

Northern Ireland Forces Ready.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, May 28 (AP).—Viscount Craigavon, premier of Ulster, told the Northern Ireland parliament today that, except for antiparachute patrols, Ulster defense forces were complete and efficient.

Fears of a Nazi invasion of Ireland to strike at England prompted the emergency defense measures.

I. R. A. Assassination Plot Bared.

CORK, Ireland, May 28 (AP).—A member of the outlawed Irish Republican army, held for possession of a loaded revolver, told a magistrate today that he had been ordered by the I. R. A. to shoot an unnamed government official. Booked as Edward Curtin, he was held for trial.

CAPTIVE FRENCH FLYERS WILL BE CHAINED: GOERING

Threatens to Execute Five Pilots for One.

BERLIN, May 28 (AP).—Captured French airmen henceforth will be placed in chains immediately, Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering announced tonight. He said this would be in retaliation for similar treatment reported by a lieutenant colonel of the Nazi air force.

A radio report said Goering specified also that "every time the murder of a German flyer is reported" five captured French flyers will be shot, and that for every report of firing on a Nazi parachuting from a damaged plane 50 enemy prisoners will be shot.

His order exempted the British because, he asserted, they have not given cause for such retaliatory measures.

Plane Set on Fire.

The air chieftain's announcement followed receipt of a report from Lieut. Col. Lackner, a squadron leader, who declared he was fired upon by French troops as he parachuted to earth from his flaming plane. Then, he said, he was set upon and beaten and finally was chained. The officer was said to have been "temporarily a prisoner of war in French hands," and presumably escaped.

"My airplane was set aflame in the vicinity of Lens by pursuit planes so that parachuting became necessary," Lacner said. "When my parachute approached the ground I was fired at with rifles from all sides.

"Troops firing at me were not in battle but in billets, so that it must justly be assumed that firing on parachuting German airmen, and the later outrageous attitude of these troops, was in accordance with French officers commanding them.

French Gendarmes Intervene.

"After my landing I was set upon by Moroccans. They tore off my combination and tunic and tore my trousers. They stole my watch, ring, pocketbook, purse containing 50 marks, and all other objects in my pockets.

"While doing so they hit me with rifle butts and other objects so that I collapsed, bleeding profusely. I was dragged to a meadow where preparations were being made to shoot me. The prevention of this intention I owe only to the sudden intervention of French gendarmes."

He then related that he was chained by the gendarmes, who answered protestations of French officers against such treatment with the statement that "these were the explicit orders of their superiors."

Giraud Sent to Fortress.

In his order, issued promptly after reading this report, Goering said:

"Magnanimous orders hitherto in force concerning treatment of enemy flyers are rescinded. In the future all French flyers, in conformity with the French example, will be chained immediately after their capture."

Goering's order followed one yesterday depriving captured allied officers of "special facilities" and the announcement of the removal of Gen. Henri Giraud, captured French commander, from a castle to a fortress.

French Fishermen to Give Sardines to Aid Refugees

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

It also voted a tax of 1 per cent upon its earnings for the relief of soldiers' families. Each fisherman has pledged himself to give the result of one day's labor to the national defense fund.

LONDON WARNED THAT IT FACES NAZI BLOCKADE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 28.—Londoners tonight were warned by the press that they must prepare for a blockade of the British capital since Belgium's surrender has placed important English channel ports entirely in German hands or very nearly so.

"German guns," the Evening Standard said, "will command the Straits of Dover and German aircraft will harass merchant traffic far down the channel. Moreover, the threat of a sea invasion will compel us to mine our shores extensively. London will lose the main part of its great sea trade and become a salient in the allied front."

The increasing danger of an invasion was underlined by the British government's decision tonight to transfer all evacuated children from areas within approximately 10 miles of the coasts of Suffolk, Essex, Kent, and parts of Norfolk. About 8,000 children will be moved to the midlands and south Wales beginning Sunday.

WHEELER OPINES ROOSEVELT WILL SEEK 3D TERM

Washington, D. C., May 28 [Special].—President Roosevelt's renomination to run for a third term was forecast in certain terms today by Senator Burton K. Wheeler, who frequently has been mentioned as one of the more important contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination. Until today, however, Senator Wheeler has insisted the President would not accept renomination.

In a statement specifically authorized for quotation, the senator said: "Every move made recently would indicate very definitely that President Roosevelt not only would be nominated for a third term but that he would accept the nomination."

Regarding the reason for making today's statement, Senator Wheeler said he was only stating the obvious. He added that developments in this country resulting from the European war had created an attitude highly favorable to renomination of President Roosevelt. He refused to discuss the possibility of President Roosevelt's reëlection.

MOMENCE FARMER FOUND DEAD.

275 MEN SWORN INTO ARMY IN 6TH CORPS AREA

Lieut. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, commander of the 6th corps area and the 2d army, reported yesterday that 275 men were sworn into the army last week in the opening drive to enlist 1,500 men in the corps before July 1. The corps area includes Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin.

"The first week's recruiting is gratifying," Gen. Ford said. "It is another step in bringing the army up to full strength as authorized by congress."

Wisconsin sent 91 recruits, Michigan 55, and Illinois 129. Of the latter 57 were drawn from the 17 northern counties to the district office in Chicago.

AIR CORPS OFFERS ACTIVE SERVICE TO U. S. RESERVES

Lieut. Gen. Stanley H. Ford announced yesterday that a canvass of air corps reserve officers in the Sixth Corps area will be made soon to determine whether they wish to go on active duty for periods up to one year with regular units of the air corps. Reserve officers normally have two weeks of active duty each year and then seldom serve these periods with tactical units.

The plan to give them active duty is part of the army's expansion program. The reservists have had certain amounts of flying in late type training planes. It is expected they will be able to step into active duty with little or no delay. Army officials estimated there may be 2,000 in the United States who can be recalled to duty immediately in this way.

The Sixth Corps area recently was informed from Washington, D. C., that places for 52 reservists from this area would be open in tactical units for the fiscal year 1940-'41.

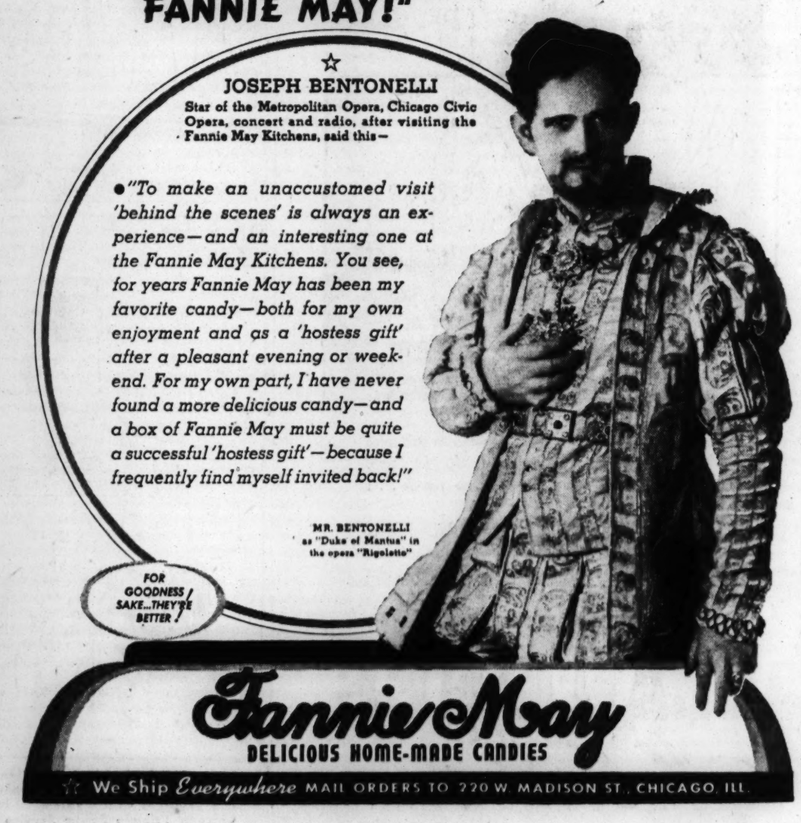
"My Favorite Candy Is FANNIE MAY!"



JOSEPH BENTONELLI
Star of the Metropolitan Opera, Chicago Civic Opera, concert and radio, after visiting the Fannie May Kitchens, said this—

"To make an unaccustomed visit 'behind the scenes' is always an experience—and an interesting one at the Fannie May Kitchens. You see, for years Fannie May has been my favorite candy—both for my own enjoyment and as a 'hostess gift' after a pleasant evening or weekend. For my own part, I have never found a more delicious candy—and a box of Fannie May must be quite a successful 'hostess gift'—because I frequently find myself invited back!"

NAVY EXPANSION BILL PASSED BY HOUSE, 400 TO 1

Aims to Speed Ship and Plane Building.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 28.—The house rushed to passage today two measures speeding the navy's shipbuilding program and expanding the naval aircraft force to 10,000 planes and 16,000 pilots.

Vito Marcantonio.

On both bills Representative Vito Marcantonio [A. L., N. Y.], chairman of the International Labor Defense, a communist front organization, cast the only ballot against the legislation. The votes were announced as 400 to 1 and 402 to 1.

Meanwhile, the house prepared to act in the next two days on the 3 billion 300 million appropriation bills for the army and navy which have already passed the senate. The record breaking appropriations are scheduled to be sped to the White House by Saturday night.

Provisions of Bills.

The main provisions of the two bills indorsed by the house and sent to the senate were:

1. Authorization for the increase of naval fighting planes to a total of not less than 10,000 and 48 lighter than air craft.

2. Provision for training facilities for 16,000 naval aviators.

3. Authorization of appropriations of $144,132,000 for the improvement and construction of naval bases.

4. Direct authority to the secretary of the navy to negotiate contracts for the construction of naval vessels or aircraft without advertising for bids.

5. Increase of the 40 hour work week on naval shipbuilding and naval defense work to 48 hours or more in the discretion of the President.

6. Lifting the cost limit of 50 million dollars on four 35,000 ton battleships authorized in 1937 and now under construction.

Additional Laws Unnecessary.

The legislation originally had proposed suspension of the Walsh-Healey act which requires government contractors to abide by the terms of the Wagner labor act, the wages and hours law, and other acts dealing with labor. The naval affairs committee reported that the President already has authority to suspend the operations of the Walsh-Healey act in regard to naval vessels, the construction of which began since June 30, 1938. It declared further legislation was unnecessary.

The main naval bases to be improved or constructed under the bill and their approximate costs follow: Norfolk, Va., $13,246,000; Corpus Christi, Tex., $25,000,000; San Juan, Puerto Rico, $2,330,000; Coco Solo, C. Z., $12,690,000; Seattle, Wash., $4,670,000; Island of Oahu, Hawaii, $6,485,000; Wake Island, $5,582,000; Quonset Point, R. I., $24,204,000; San Diego, Cal., $5,637,000; Alameda, Cal., $6,861,000; Unalaska, Alaska, $2,963,000.

Representative Robert A. Grant [R., Ind.] said President Roosevelt gave a misleading impression in his radio address last Sunday night when he indicated that the sea fighting forces had been increased vastly under the multibillion dollar defense spending of the last six years. The false impression was conveyed, Grant said, by including all tonnage still on the building ways, some of which will not be commissioned for two years.

Department of commerce figures show, Grant said, that there was an actual decrease in the number of naval vessels fit for service between Jan. 1, 1935, and Jan. 1, 1939.

2 ACCUSE NLRB OF HAMPERING DEFENSE WORK

Washington, D. C., May 28 (AP).—Two members of the house asserted today that the national labor board was hampering defense preparations.

Representative Clare Hoffman [R., Mich.] said the board was responsible for delaying a shipment of airplane motors to the Philadelphia naval aircraft factory, and Representative E. E. Cox [D., Ga.] said the board was "sabotaging business thru corrupt administration of a harsh law."

Amendments to the Wagner act, which created the board, have been scheduled tentatively to come up in the house late this week.

Off the floor, Hoffman said that the airplane engine delay had occurred when strikers at the Bohn Aluminum and Brass corporation at Detroit prevented the navy from using drawings and specifications for the engines during a C. I. O. labor disturbance there.

"I charge the board with responsibility for such things," Hoffman declared, "because it has fostered and protected the C. I. O."

Cox asserted that Dr. David Saposs, labor board economist, was "10,000 times more dangerous than 10,000 Harry Bridgeses." Bridges is a C. I. O. leader on the Pacific coast. "We are going to deport Bridges," Cox shouted. "I wonder what we're going to do with Witt, Saposs, Madden, and the unspeakable Smith."

ARMY ASKS FOR BIDS ON 416 ANTITANK GUN CARRIAGES JUNE 12

Rock Island, Ill., May 28 [Special].—The Rock Island arsenal today advertised for bids on 416 more .37 millimeter gun carriages. The bids will be opened in 15 days. Contracts for this lot of carriages will bring total orders for private industrial plants to 766, bids having been opened last week on 350.

Speed is emphasized in current orders, the delivery date being set at 360 days. Carriages must be equipped with tools and accessories and will be delivered to the Aberdeen, Md., proving grounds where .37 millimeter antitank guns will be mounted for test firing.

The .37 millimeter gun will penetrate one and a half inch armor plate at 1,500 yards, altho it probably would not be effective against tanks with three inch plate.

DRAFT U. S. ARMS TAX TO YIELD 720 MILLIONS A YEAR

Linked to 3 Billion Dollar Increase in Debt Limit.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 28.—Administration officials and congressional leaders today agreed on a plan to finance the 3 billion dollar armaments program. It calls for a 3 billion dollar increase in the statutory debt limit, a special national defense bond issue in the same amount, and new taxes to retire the bonds within five years.

Additional taxes of 600 million dollars a year would be required to amortize such a bond issue in five years, not counting interest. It is estimated, however, that the new tax proposals tentatively agreed upon by the administration and congressional leaders will yield from 690 to 720 million dollars a year. The proposed taxes and their estimated yield:

1. A 10 per cent supertax on individual and corporation income taxes for taxable years after Dec. 31, 1939	$210,000,000
2. A 10 per cent supertax on other internal revenue taxes, including manufacturers' excise taxes but not social security taxes	160,000,000
3. An increase in the federal gasoline tax from 1 cent to 2 cents a gallon, effective July 1	200,000,000
4. An increase in the federal beer tax from $5 to $6 per barrel, effective July 1	75,000,000
5. An increase in the tax on distilled spirits from $2.25 to $3 a gallon, effective July 1	75,000,000
Total	$720,000,000

An alternative proposal under consideration by Democratic members of the house ways and means committee is to increase the gasoline tax by only ½ cent a gallon, to raise $100,000,000; and to increase the tax on cigarets from $3 to $3.50 per thousand, to raise $70,000,000. This would result in a total of 690 million dollars.

Quick Approval Indicated.

The response in congress to the new tax program was overwhelmingly favorable, indicating that it will be enacted promptly. Both senate and house leaders expressed confidence that congress will approve the program in time to adjourn before the opening of the Republican national convention in Philadelphia on June 24.

Republicans and some conservative Democrats expressed opposition to the proposed 3 billion dollar increase in the 45 billion dollar statutory debt limit, preferring to finance the rearmament program by slashing other government expenditures as well as levying new taxes.

Other alternative proposals are expected to be offered, but it generally is agreed that the program approved by the administration and Democratic leaders in congress will go thru substantially unchanged.

Democratic members of the house ways and means committee discussed the new tax proposals at a special meeting this afternoon and the full committee will begin work on a bill tomorrow morning. The senate finance committee also will begin consideration of the tax proposals tomorrow.

Jump Gun in Senate.

Revenue legislation must originate in the house, but Senator Pat Harrison [D., Miss.], chairman of the finance committee, said he wanted to be ready for immediate senate action when the house bill is received.

Republicans generally applauded the new tax program and took credit for forcing the administration decision. When President Roosevelt submitted his national defense recommendations two weeks ago he dismissed such considerations as taxes and the debt limit as minor details.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [R., Mich.], one of the first to charge the administration with fiscal irresponsibility and to demand action on a national defense tax bill at this session, pledged his coöperation as the ranking minority member of the senate finance committee.

Figures Spur Decision.

The new fiscal program was agreed upon at a conference of treasury officials and congressional leaders in the treasury department. President Roosevelt approved it by telephone. The plan was initiated by Senator Harrison. As late as last Friday the administration was disposed to postpone action on taxes or the debt limit until the next session of congress in January, after the presidential election.

Senator Harrison, however, became alarmed when shown an expert analysis of government receipts and expenditures. He called Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau and told him something had to be done. A series of conferences over the week-end resulted in the agreement at today's conference.

Senator Harrison opposed an increase in the debt limit, while the administration opposed new taxes. The scheme is a compromise between the two viewpoints.

Demands Balanced Budget.

Before Senator Harrison returned from the treasury conference, and apparently unaware of the new program, Senator Harry F. Byrd [D., Va.] and Senator Millard E. Tydings [D., Md.] addressed the senate with demands for immediate action to put the government's finances in order. Tydings said the country had neglected to prepare for one of the most serious aspects of national defense, which he called the financial front.

"That flank is dangerously exposed and if it remains exposed the results may be fatal or tragically serious in the years that are to come," he said.

Later, replying to Senator Harrison, Tydings said he could not subscribe to the "rosy picture that the raising of 600 or 700 million dollars is going to be anything more than a gesture toward restoring the government to a sound financial condition." He demanded that action be taken now to bring the government's revenues and expenditures into balance.

Byrd Asks Slash in Budget.

Senator Byrd also declared that financial preparedness is just as important as military preparedness.

"It is the impelling duty of congress," he said, "to eliminate every extravagance, to abolish every unnecessary expenditure, to devote our resources to the vital necessity of preparing ourselves to meet any contingency and any crisis that may occur."

Senator Byrd expressed opposition to any increase in the national debt limit and proposed as an alternative a 10 per cent increase in income and miscellaneous taxes and a 10 per cent decrease in all appropriations for the next fiscal year except those for the national defense and interest on the public debt.

The 10 per cent slash in appropriations would apply to the salaries of all federal jobholders, including senators and congressmen. Senator Byrd said the plan would improve the condition of the treasury to the extent of 1 billion dollars.

DEERFIELD BOY, 5, DROWNS IN WELL; MANY IN SEARCH

Le Roy Pottenger, 5 years old, of 440 Elm street, Deerfield, son of Marshall Pottenger, a village trustee and superintendent of the Franken Brothers' nursery in Deerfield, was found drowned early today in six feet of water at the bottom of an abandoned well on property of the Deerfield greenhouse, which adjoins his home.

The boy disappeared about 7 o'clock last night. Pottenger was attending a meeting of trustees when his wife telephoned that Le Roy was missing. Policemen, firemen, members of the Lake county sheriff's staff, and about 100 citizens, including American Legion members and Boy Scouts, began a search, using flashlights.

Harold Plagge, a constable, noticed that rotted boards over the well were broken and firemen pumped out the well and recovered the child's body.

COST OF ARMY 6 BILLIONS IN LAST 16 YEARS

Small Percentage Goes for Equipment.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 28.—Secretary of War Harry Woodring today reported that the United States spent more than 6 billion dollars on the army in the 16 fiscal years from 1925 to 1940 inclusive.

The secretary of war made public a break down of military appropriations, which is given in adjoining columns, showing appropriations, recurring charges and new equipment for the entire army and air corps separately and the grand total of appropriations for the 16 fiscal years.

Total appropriations for the military establishment in that period was $6,169,300,000, including allotments from federal emergency funds. The total includes not only the army but the National Guard, organized reserve, Reserve Officers Training corps, the Citizens Military Training camps and other military activities.

Mostly Running Expenses.

Of the total 86.1 per cent or $5,314,744,000 went for what is termed recurring charges and improvement of plant. These include pay, rations, clothing, repairs, research and development, planning, construction, training, operations, maneuvers, schools, and similar activities.

In the 16 years army appropriations for augmentation, modernization, and replacement of arms and equipment, including new aircraft, spare engines, spare parts, bombs, new tanks, anti-aircraft and anti-tank guns, semi-automatic rifles, truck tractors, field guns, machine guns, ammunition, and smiliar material total only $854,556,000.

Of the 854½ millions for new equipment, $509,900,000 went to the army air corps, leaving only $344,656,000, a bare 5.6 per cent, available for the augmentation, replacement and modernization of arms and equipment for the army's ground forces. The ground forces received only an average of 21 millions a year for modernization purposes.

Of the 854½ millions appropriation for new equipment almost 40 per cent was made available in the current fiscal year. The last congress appropriated a total of $321,429,000 for new equipment which is now almost spent.

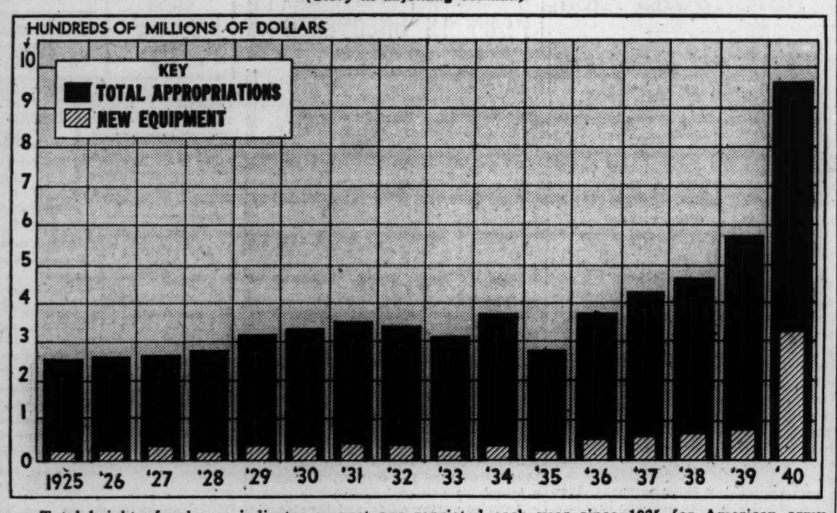
1941 Total Almost as Much.

Under the expanded defense program the army will get almost as much to spend in the fiscal year which will begin next July 1 as it did in the last 16 fiscal years. Army expenditures for new equipment in the bill, which may reach the White House this week, will total about 714 million dollars.

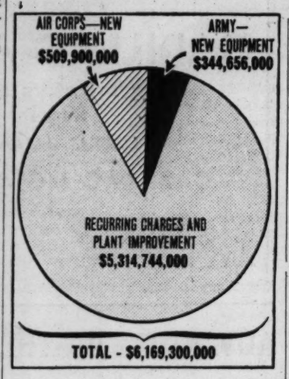
"In view of these facts," Secretary Woodring said, "it is rather remarkable to me that we have been able to maintain any mobile ground army at all, especially when it is considered that the useful life of much military equipment, such as tanks and heavy motor vehicles, barely exceeds five years."

Billions Spent on Army, but Little War Equipment Bought

(Story in adjoining column.)



Total height of columns indicates amount app ropriated each year since 1925 for American army. The diagonally lined section of each column shows c omparatively small amount spent for new equipment. The rest went for what is called recurring charges an d improvement of plant.



Of the six billions spent for army purposes in the last 16 years, 86.1 per cent went for recurring charges and improvement of plant, and of the rest 5.6 per cent went for new army equipment and the remainder for the air corps.

JAP BOMB PERILS U. S. WARSHIP IN CHUNGKING RAID

Falls Only 100 Yards from Gunboat.

CHUNGKING, China, May 28 (AP).—A heavy bomb fell within 100 yards of the United States gunboat Tutuila today as the foreign quarter of the city was severely damaged by a Japanese air attack in which 300 Chinese civilians were believed killed.

The Tutuila—a river patrol vessel similar to the U. S. S. Panay, sunk by Japanese air bombs Dec. 12, 1937—was not damaged.

Five Bombers Shot Down.

Another bomb fell into the Yangtze river near the Standard Oil company's tanks and docks. Others fell in a complete ring around the Russian embassy, but only an embassy automobile was damaged.

Five Japanese bombers were reported officially to have been shot down.

150 Bombs Hit Foreign Zone.

It was believed none of the 600 foreigners in this temporary seat of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's government were among the dead and injured.

More than 150 bombs fell on the foreign quarter, destroying 50 homes. A house rented by Andrew Bassi of Chicago, Ill., was damaged.

BASSI FAMILY IN CHICAGO.

Andrew B. Bassi Jr., whose residence in Chungking, China, was damaged by a Japanese bomb yesterday, is a transportation expert employed by the Keeshin Motor Express company of Chicago. His wife and two children live at 8351 Luella avenue. Mrs. Basis said her husband had been in China for some time.

DECIDE TO KEEP U. S. ENVOYS IN INVADED LANDS

Washington, D. C., May 28 (AP).—The state department has changed its policy concerning retention of American envoys at their posts in invaded countries—and now wants them to remain unless the danger to them personally becomes too great.

Officials believe American ambassadors and ministers can be more useful to this country by remaining in the capitals to which they are accredited, even if the capitals are under German domination, than by following governments which have become, for most practical purposes, figureheads.

HELD FOR WISCONSIN SHERIFF.

Nate Abbinanti, alias Nick Bennett, 43 years old, was held by Chicago avenue police Juneau county, Wisconsin. Sheriff McEvoy yesterday for Sheriff Preston McEvoy of said Abbinanti was wanted at Mauston, Wis., on charges of passing bogus checks totaling $1,403.

'ABE FEIN, ALIAS SERGT. MURPHY, MEETS THE M'COY

Abe Fein.

Abe Fein, 45 years old, who sometimes calls himself Sergt. Murphy, was locked up at the detective bureau as a kidnaper yesterday afternoon after a cautious bank employé and a real Sergt. Murphy caught up with one of his plots.

Ohmad Hassen, 47, of 54 East 18th street, was the kidnaping victim. Hassen, a rug salesman, met Fein on Monday in Dayton, O. Fein, in the character of Sergt. Murphy, took him into custody "as a suspected moron." Hassen said his captor and a confederate brought him to Chicago after they had examined his bank book and found he had $5,000 in the First National bank. The false sergeant, he added, said this amount would cover his bond.

In the bank, a teller delayed things when he tried to draw the large sum and invited him into a private room. His story was told and the police notified. Sergts. John Murphy and Benjamin Ryan arrested Fein, who has a police record as an extortioner.

Georgina Juul, Evanston Policewoman, to Retire

Mrs. Georgina Juul, an Evanston policewoman for 25 years, resigned yesterday and will take the status of a pensioner. Mrs. Juul was cited 14 times for meritorious service and twice won the James A. Patten award for outstanding police work. She said last night that she intended to rest and will make her home in a cottage she owns at Hayward, Wis. She is a widow and the mother of three sons.

RED CROSS COST CLIMBS SHARPLY UNDER NEW DEAL

Chairman Davis' Annual Pay Rises to $18,000.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 28. — Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's former roving ambassador, receives a salary of $18,000 a year, including expenses, as chairman of the American Red Cross, to which post the President appointed him, it was disclosed today. This sum is larger than his pay as special ambassador, which was at the rate of $17,500 a year for the time actually spent on the job.

Norman H. Davis.

The records of the Red Cross show that salaries and other overhead have risen sharply during the Roosevelt administration. The latest annual report reveals that 12 executives now receive annual salaries of $7,200 or more, compared with only two in the same bracket in 1933. Other comparative salaries for the two years follow:

$6,000 to $7,200	8	5
$5,000 to $6,000	6	11
$4,000 to $5,000	20	17
$3,000 to $4,000	28	61
$2,500 to $3,000	62	88

Pay Refused by Payne.

Judge John Barton Payne, who was chairman of the Red Cross for 13 years, until his death on Jan. 24, 1935, refused remuneration for the job. Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson was appointed by Mr. Roosevelt to succeed Judge Payne and in 1935 and 1936 received about $4,300 a year, to cover expenses. This income was derived from a special fund contributed to the Red Cross under the provision that its earnings be devoted to the chairmanship.

Admiral Grayson died on Feb. 15, 1935, and was succeeded by Davis. By 1937, Davis' compensation had risen to $12,000, consisting of $7,200 from the special fund and $4,800 appropriated by the central, or governing, committee of the Red Cross. In 1938 and 1939 Davis' income from the job amounted to $18,000 a year, of which $12,000 was appropriated by the central committee and $6,000 came from the special fund to cover expenses.

Other Expenditures Rise.

Other executive expenditures of the organization also have risen sharply. Costs for supervision of service activities and general management for the National Red Cross are shown in the following table for recent years [ended June 30]:

Year	Amount.	Chairman.
1934	166,827	Payne
1935	332,231	Grayson
1936	341,077	Grayson
1937	325,247	Grayson
1938	394,999	Davis
1939	427,673	Davis

In the 1933 fiscal year there were 764 regular employés on the national organization's pay roll. This rose to 889 last year.

A spokesman for the Red Cross denied reports that Davis, a Democrat, has barred Republicans from salaried positions with the organization, particularly in work among foreign language groups. He said that while the chairman has appointive powers and wields wide influence, the top executives are mostly veterans in the service and minor employés are hired thru the personnel division.

Explains Committee Makeup.

A candidate for employment with the Red Cross is not required to state his political beliefs, the spokesman said, and added that the central committee of 18 members is still dominated by Republicans. Six of the central committee's members are appointed by the President, six are elected by the Red Cross incorporators, and the other six are elected by the delegates of Red Cross chapters.

The spokesman said that Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Democrat and former assistant secretary of the treasury, now engaged in directing Red Cross relief abroad, under supervision of headquarters, is allowed his expenses but no salary. Taylor was appointed by Davis.

Resources of the national Red Cross at the end of the 1939 fiscal year amounted to $14,048,139, compared with $12,628,534 in 1933, but were lower than the predepression figure of $16,412,897 on June 30, 1930.

RED CROSS DOUBLES WAR RELIEF QUOTA; SEEKS 20 MILLIONS

Washington, D. C., May 28 [Special].—The American Red Cross today issued a new appeal to its 3,700 chapters to raise a fund of $20,000,000 or more for war relief. This is double the amount originally asked. Norman H. Davis, Red Cross chairman, said in the telegram sent to all chapters that it should be regarded as only a minimum immediate objective.

"When the American Red Cross asked a minimum war relief fund of $10,000,000," Davis said, "no one could foresee that in two short weeks the greatest tragedy in all history would be unfolded. It is impossible to describe the pitiful plight of millions of refugees in France."

The war relief fund reached $3,500,000 today, Red Cross headquarters announced.

PRESBYTERIANS URGE RECALL OF ENVOY TO VATICAN

Conscientious Objection to War Is Approved.

Rochester, N. Y., May 28 [Special].—A resolution urging President Roosevelt to recall Myron C. Taylor, his personal representative at the Vatican, "at the earliest possible date" was passed here today by the 152d general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States.

During a turbulent session marked by confusion and outbreaks of booing, the assembly also reversed its action of Friday and approved conscientious objection to war.

The resolution asking Taylor's recall was similar to those recently adopted by Baptist and Lutheran groups and subscribed to by numerous Protestant leaders. It was adopted after 45 minutes of stormy debate on the principle of separation of church and state.

Amendments were offered to change the wording slightly and to soften the force of the resolution by a statement that the church approved the President's "purpose to promote the interests of peace." All were voted down.

The climax came in a round of boos which greeted a motion by the Rev. Lawrence W. Harrison of Cincinnati to approve the President's selection of a personal representative to the Vatican.

Demands Voice for Minority.

The Rev. Alvin B. Gurley of Saranac Lake, N. Y., grandson of the late Phinneas B. Gurley, who preached at Abraham Lincoln's funeral, won for the Rev. Mr. Harvison a chance to speak on his motion by pleading the right of a minority to have its say.

Asserting that a resolution asking Taylor's recall would only "irritate our Catholic friends," the Cincinnati minister contended that the appointment was to the Vatican state, rather than to the Roman Catholic church. His motion was quashed quickly.

The Rev. Gordon J. Kibler of Scranton, Pa., construed Taylor's mission as having kept Italy out of the war so far and argued that the resolution's passage would embarrass the government in an "honest effort for peace." He analyzed the issue at stake as greater than that of separation of church and state because of the war.

Charges Link with Reds.

The controversy over conscientious objectors reached its peak when Dr. John T. Bergen of Minneapolis condemned protection of conscientious objectors. He said the resolution assumed a state of war, that the church should concern itself with peace, and that a military draft in the United States is unlikely.

Charging that pacifism in this country is being financed by communists, the Rev. A. D. Minnick of Cresson, Pa., asserted: "I am ready to lay down my life for my country and my God. I am not above Christ, who was willing to shed his blood."

Cries rang out from all parts of the floor for recognition by the moderator, but debate was closed and the resolution passed by a slight voice vote majority.

Rumanian employés in the zones are subject to military orders as if in an army zone, and inhabitants are required to surrender their arms, munitions and explosives.

PLANE AND PILOT PLANS TOO SLOW, EXPERTS BELIEVE

Roosevelt's Scheme Flayed at Forum.

Washington, D. C., May 28 [Special].—Aviation experts, including air line operating officials and pilots, appearing at sessions of the national air forum today, criticized the Roosevelt administration's projected airplane production and pilot training programs as likely to be too late to get results in event this country should be invaded by powerful air forces.

Speakers were united in urging greater coöperation between the aviation industry and the nation's armed forces, to work out the most efficient and quickest preparedness measures possible.

Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association of America, emphasized the danger of fooling the public as to early aviation production capacity in connection with President Roosevelt's announced plan to build 50,000 airplanes a year.

100,000 Pilots Needed.

Gorrell warned that lack of sufficient airplane engines, trained military aviators, and ground personnel which delayed the United States aviation program in world war days with dangerous results still exist and must be eliminated before the nation can achieve the effective air force.

Robert Dawson, veteran New York-Chicago air line pilot, said 50,000 new planes will require not only 50,000 pilots but 50,000 additional reserve pilots, besides a greatly augmented force of mechanics and other ground personnel. Current plans for starting new schools to train this personnel are too slow, he added.

Dawson proposed that the government turn the pilot training program over to the country's 1,200 air line pilots, most of whom have experience as instructors and in military aviation. Given proper authority and enough good training planes, he said, these pilots could start 1,000 flying clubs at once and every 10 weeks would be able to turn out 5,000 pilots who could qualify as military flyers within six months.

Coöperation Pledged.

Other speakers concurred in offering their complete coöperation, not only in the program aimed at building 50,000 planes a year, but also in the announced plan to start training 50,000 pilots a year as soon as possible.

However, they also were in agreement in expressing doubts of the success of these efforts unless the government takes prompt and decisive action to mobilize the best brains of the nation's aviation industry and armed forces, and drops all vestiges of the muddling thru philosophy which, it was emphasized, has handicapped the United States aviation defense program.

DEWEY ACCUSES ROOSEVELT OF LACK OF CANDOR

Disputes His Figures on Strength of Arms.

Shreveport, La., May 28 [Special].—Thomas E. Dewey, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, today took sharp issue with President Roosevelt's statistics on the state of the nation's defenses, demanded that preparedness plans be taken out of the realm of politics, and charged the President with lack of candor.

In a press conference here Dewey told reporters that President Roosevelt's speech, broadcast Sunday night, was deeply disturbing. Dewey quoted the President's statement that "this is a time to be calm," and added, "I agree, but it is also a time to be frank."

Dewey, who spoke last night at a rally preceding the opening of the Texas Republican state convention, in Dallas, made a three hour stopover here on his way from Dallas to Brimingham, Ala., where he will speak at noon tomorrow.

Dispute Roosevelt's Figures.

Dewey reiterated his previously expressed contention that the national defense program must be divorced from politics and placed in the hands of qualified industrial experts, not burocratic bunglers. Specifically, he found fault with figures on United States defense arms, quoted by the President.

"The President in his speech said that since 1933 we had purchased 5,640 airplanes for the army," Dewey said, "but he failed to point out that the army has now less than 2,800 planes, of which only 863 are combat planes, not one of which has fully modern equipment.

"The President blandly said that we have 1,700 modern antiaircraft guns of all types 'on hand or on order.' That information is less than helpful.

Lack Guns and Gunners.

"The fact is that we do not have a single one of the modern 90 millimeter guns actually on hand, to say nothing of having anybody who knows how to shoot one. We actually have 15 of the 37 millimeter antiaircraft guns and only 448 3 inch antiaircraft guns.

"The remainder of that originally impressive figure consists of 1,014 fifty-caliber machine guns which are wholly inadequate for modern defense against aircraft.

"Perhaps the most disturbing thing of all is the President's statement, made thru his secretary, that the government intends to use experts 'not to supersede, but to work with, advise with and coördinate with the officers of the government.'

"It is a grave situation when the administration fails to realize that those who have warred on business and bungled national defense are not an asset but a liability. National defense must not be left in their hands, using experts as assistants to the bunglers. The industrial genius of America must be made boss of this program and promptly."

3 BELGIAN SHIPS ORDERED TO TIE UP AT NEW YORK

New York, May 28 (AP).—Three Belgian ships in New York harbor when King Leopold ordered his army to surrender were instructed to tie up here pending developments.

The ships are the 7,430 ton Ville D'Anvers, the Gandia, 9,626 tons, and the Mercier, 7,886 tons.

The United States Lines, which operates seven former American ships under the Belgian flag, said it was undecided what to do with them.

As in the case of Denmark, the British are expected to class Belgian ships as "enemy" vessels, leaving them subject to seizure by the western powers.

SENATE PUTS O. K. ON PLAN TO HELP NEIGHBORS ARM

Bill Opens Factories to 20 Latin Republics.

Washington, D. C., May 28 [Special].—A bill authorizing the United States government, thru the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy, to assist the 20 republics of Central and South America to increase their military and naval establishments was sent to President Roosevelt today for signature.

By unanimous vote the senate approved a measure passed by the house on July 24, 1939. The President is expected to sign it promptly.

The bill provides authorization for the manufacture in United States factories and arsenals of coast defense and antiaircraft ordnance, ammunition, vessels, and armament generally. But such facilities, the bill provides, cannot be provided if the defense program of the United States were to be impeded thereby.

United to Fight Aggression.

At almost the same moment Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, declared that all of the American republics are prepared to unite against aggression from any quarter in the knowledge that an attack on one would challenge the security of all.

Welles spoke at the dedication of the Christopher Columbus arms mural in the Library of Congress, before an audience of Latin American diplomats and government officials.

"Thruout a great part of the world," Welles said, "those liberties we cherish, and by which we live, have been assailed, and at least momentarily destroyed. Almost hourly one can see spreading the tide of carnage and devastation which engulfs millions.

Aware of Dangers.

"I realize that at last we are fully aware of these dangers in the Americas. There never previously has existed so comprehensive an understanding, so close a relationship, as that which fortunately binds the American republics together today. Any act of aggression by a non-American power, whether it be committed south or north of the equator, is a challenge to the security of all, and will be so regarded by them.

"As we look back to the earlier days and draw inspiration from the lives of the men and women who created our republic, we can see clearly that our liberties, our institutions, our very independence were achieved by sacrifice and by suffering, and not infrequently by blood and sweat.

"The price of our continued security is the eternal vigilance and unselfish devotion to the public interest of those in authority, together with a continuance of effective and intimate coöperation on the part of all the governments of the western hemisphere."

PANAMA EYES TRAFFIC TO CANAL ZONE AFTER PLOT IS UNCOVERED

PANAMA CITY, Panama, May 28 (AP).—The government today established rigid control over communications between this republic and the Canal Zone, where leaders of an alleged abortive revolutionary plot were reported in hiding. Police precautions, intensified since announcement last Sunday that the plot had been uncovered, include the halting of all vehicles coming from the Canal Zone.

Francisco Arias, leader of the opposition party, and several followers were arrested Sunday. Mario Alfaro, nephew of Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, former president of Panama and opposition candidate in the current campaign, also was seized. Officials said he called for several sacks of rifles, revolvers and ammunition which were reported to have arrived at the Gatun lock railroad station but that he left without them when the station attendant delayed the delivery to make a telephone call.

American army officers of the Canal Zone and reliable semiofficial sources in Panama denied reports that a Tetas river bridge between the Canal Zone and the army's Rio Hata airport project had been damaged by an explosion in preëlection disorders.

WILLKIE MAY GET SOME OF JERSEY DELEGATE VOTES

G. O. P. Conclave Evinces Subsurface Rift.

Trenton, N. J., May 28 (AP).—New Jersey's 32 member delegation to the Republican national convention organized today amid subsurface discord on whether they were bound to support the presidential candidacy of Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Dewey ran high in the state's preferential primary election last Tuesday, but Wendell L. Willkie, utilities magnate, received thousands of write-in votes as a result of a campaign started by admirers shortly before the primary. Scattered votes were cast for others.

The Republican state committee last February expressed a desire that its compromise slate of four delegates at large to the convention follow the wishes of the Republican voters as evidenced by the primary.

Many state committee members said they "hoped" the 28 district delegates and their alternates would follow the lead of the "big four."

Some Lean to Willkie.

Today Daniel E. Pomeroy of Englewood, national Republican committeeman and a "big four" member, said that as he viewed it the district representatives had "no choice."

But several district delegates, including State Treasurer William H. Albright, said they felt nothing binding in the state committee's resolution.

A spokesman for the "dissenting" delegates said they leaned to Willkie, and indicated they would not split among themselves for other possible nominees.

Cromwell Defends Speech.

In a keynote speech at the Democratic state convention today, James H. R. Cromwell defended his pro-ally address in Toronto on March 19. Cromwell, who resigned his diplomatic post to become Democratic candidate for the United States senate from New Jersey, told the convention his Toronto talk was "a very quiet alarm indeed" in the light of recent world events.

"I had dared before election day to tell the truth and thereby to create the suspicion in the minds of my fellow countrymen that perhaps the soothsayers had lulled them into a false security," Cromwell asserted.

Lindell said hearings on rezoning of residential areas will start in the fall.

They were released on personal bonds of $500 each to await trial on June 15. They were arrested in an area adjacent to the Ford Motor company's River Rouge plant.

Mr. Lebold is a paper board box manufacturer. The gems were taken May 25 from a cottage in the Hotel Del Monte grounds, where the Chicagoans have been since May 1. Among the items missing were a diamond link bracelet, a diamond watch, diamond rings and pins.

IF EVERYTHING SEEMS TO GO WRONG

Answer this question . . .

Are you sure that you may not be a victim of too much acid in your bladder!—a condition which can be brought on if your kidneys fail to eliminate at least two quarts a day. Here's what can happen if that occurs—

The acids and by-products of metabolism (which are expelled thru the bladder) are insufficiently diluted. They reach the bladder in such a highly concentrated acid condition that they irritate the sphincter muscle and the sensitive bladder linings. Such irritations can cause those "overwhelming" urges that wake you up; pains in back, lower abdomen and the legs; burning passages, itching. Under such conditions, you can't be blamed if you feel blue. But you can be blamed if you take no steps to relieve such a situation.

Take FOLEY PILLS. They act on your kidneys and bladder in three ways. They stir those sluggish kidneys, and dilute and neutralize the over-acid contents of your bladder. Furthermore, FOLEY PILLS transform those over-acid contents into a bland solution which actually helps soothe those tortured tissues and quiet those irritations which may be responsible for those "overwhelming" urges, backaches, getting up nights, burning, itching, etc.

Don't let too much acid in your bladder make you feel worse. Start taking Foley Pills today. Quick results, quick relief, quick satisfaction or your money back. At all druggists.

ONE OUT OF FOUR FOUND GUILTY IN STRIKE VIOLENCE

One of the four men arrested for violence during the recent strike a the American Needle and Novelty company plant, 2331 North Washtenaw avenue, was found guilty in Boys' court yesterday on a charge of malicious mischief. All are members of the United Haters, Cap, and Millinery Workers' union, an affiliate of the American Federaion of Labor.

The four, accused of throwing bricks thru the window of a non-striker's home, are Walter Kucharski, 26 years old, 1628 Beach avenue; James Malatesta, 21, of 915 South Bishop street; John Czurylo, 20, of 1520 Cortez street, and Vincent Bik, 20, of 1326 Cortez street.

Kucharski was found guilty by Judge Joseph Drucker, who continued to June 6 a motion for probation. The other three were ordered kept under court supervision for a year and their cases continued for that period. Assistant State's Attorney William Crawford said all four had admitted the vandalism, altho none testified yesterday.

GARNER FORCES WIN TEXAS VOTE 'MID FIST FIGHTS

Roosevelt's Son Shouted Down in Convention.

Waco, Tex., May 28.—Vice President John N. Garner won the state's 46 votes to the Democratic national convention today at a tumultuous assembly where fists flew freely and angry shouts drowned out the words of the keynote speaker.

Maury Maverick [top], Tom Miller.

Finally brought to order by former Gov. Pat M. Neff of Waco, now president of Baylor university, the unruly delegates quickly swung into line behind Garner-Roosevelt harmony forces.

Following the pattern draftedat the time the harmony agreement was reached, the convention indorsed the administration of President Roosevelt and directed that the delegation do nothing to embarrass him. The delegation, bound by the unit rule, was instructed specifically not to participate in any anti-Roosevelt or stop Roosevelt movement at the Chicago convention.

Roosevelt's Son Booed.

Police broke up numerous fights or near fights. A banner declaring "We want Roosevelt" was destroyed. A storm of boos swept the auditorium as Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, introduced the keynote speaker, Mayor Tom Miller of Austin.

Miller's voice, as he praised President Roosevelt and then offered the name of Garner for the nomination, could be heard only a few feet from the rostrum.

Earlier in the day Miller, altho a leader of the original third term organization in Texas, was involved in a clash with Maury Maverick, mayor of San Antonio, and ardent third term supporter. The two gave different versions of the affair.

Mayors Pushed Around.

Miller said Maverick made an insulting remark to him. "So I hit him."

Maverick said "Miller started it" by aiming a blow at him which missed. He declined further comment.

Witnesses agreed the two mayors pushed each other around.

Despite his personal views, Maverick later cast his vote with his county delegation, which had been instructed for the harmony plan.

Harmony leaders maintain they are not anti-Roosevelt and that the fight in Texas is not a clean cut Roosevelt-Garner contest. They say that large numbers of the delegates instructed for Garner are warm supporters also of the President and that the noisy element demanding instructions for Roosevelt are trying to aggrandize themselves.

G. O. P. Delegates Uninstructed.

Dallas, Tex., May 28 (AP).—Texas Republicans voted to send an uninstructed delegation to the national convention. The delegation was picked at the party's state convention today. It has 26 votes.

Carter had the backing of the Townsend organization.

TENEMENT FIRE DEATH OF BOY, 12, IS HELD ACCIDENT

An investigation by a special coroner's jury of the death of a 12 year old boy in an alleged tenement fire trap May 14 was concluded yesterday with a verdict of accidental death.

Joseph K. Brittain, past president of the Chicago real estate board, was foreman of the jury, which included three blue ribbon members named by Coroner A. L. Brodie. "We could not legally draft recommendations that would mean anything," Brittain said. "What is needed is action—not statements."

The victim was John Pontrelli, who was suffocated in a fire that swept the three story, nine flat building at 607 Elizabeth street. The boy's father, Frank, saved his wife and two small children by chopping thru a door into an adjoining flat.

John E. Goldberg, a city building inspector, described the building as a fire trap. He said the building code, however, exempts private dwellings of three stories and less from annual inspection. The other special members of the jury were John D. Allen, president of the Brink's Express company, and Mrs. Mitchell Dawson, chairman of the Metropolitan Housing council's substandard housing committee. She was the first woman to serve on a Cook county coroner's jury.

Police Hunt Two Who Escaped from Hospital

Police last night were hunting two Chicago youths who escaped Monday night from the state hospital for the feeble minded at Dixon. The youths are Ivor Pinkett, 16 years old, colored, whose mother lives at 554 East 60th street, and James Freeman, 21, whose mother lives at 6030 South Park avenue. Three other youths who also escaped when a group of inmates were being escorted to a dance in the hospital gymnasium were retaken yesterday near Dixon.

WILLKIE OFFICES OPENED IN RACE FOR PRESIDENCY

Utilities Chief to Be Guest at Luncheon Today.

Wendell Willkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern corporation of New York, will be the guest of Illinois Republican leaders at a luncheon today in the Palmer House.

A. K. Stiles, who recently retired as Illinois Republican state chairman, announced yesterday the opening of Willkie for President Volunteer committee offices at 221 North La Salle street. Stiles will devote all his time between now and the opening of the Republican national convention June 24 to Willkie's candidacy.

The luncheon today will be in the nature of a sendoff of Willkie's campaign in Illinois. The hosts will be Henry A. Gardner, former president of the Chicago Bar association, and his partner, James H. Douglas Jr. The Illinois delegates to the Republican convention have been invited.

Among the Republican leaders expected to attend are Dwight H. Green, nominee for governor; State Chairman Ben L. Berve; National Committeeman Hill Blacket; National Committeewoman Mrs. Bertha Baur; Arnold Benson, state senate Republican leader; Hugh Green, house Republican caucus leader, and Charles B. Goodspeed, treasurer of the Republican national committee. Forty-five acceptances have been received.

DEFENSE WEAKNESS CITED

Akron, O., May 28 [Special].—Wendell L. Willkie tonight charged that the Roosevelt administration has failed to give the American people a true picture of the state of their armed forces and appealed for the cooperation of the best brains in industry, labor, and government to build a strong national defense.

Willkie, who is regarded as a contender for the Republican nomination for the presidency, spoke before Summit post, No. 13, of the American Legion, of which he was commander for two years. He cited military deficiencies disclosed in recent army maneuvers in Louisiana and presented figures showing what he described as a woeful lack of modern equipment.

Willkie said he believed a direct attack by Adolf Hitler on this continent was unlikely, but stated his personal hatred and fear of the German Fuehrer.

Realistic Approach Urged.

He advocated a realistic approach to the question of American aid to Great Britain and France "by all means short of war." He suggested that Secretary of State Cordell Hull openly ask the empires what help they want and need. Even if the resulting requests could not be granted, he added, this procedure would at least be practical, he said, and would give the American people real information.

He said the administration is not presenting facts fairly when it asserts the army is modern and well equipped, and it also fails to give a realistic idea of the cost of adequate defense.

"In spite of our present unpreparedness our defense expenditures have been enormous," he said. "In 10 years since 1930 we have spent about 6 billion 600 million dollars on defense. If it has cost that much to get us poorly equipped, how much will it cost to get ourselves really modernized? It is a staggering thought.

Lack of Troops Described.

"We can dismiss as academic any thought of going over there to save Britain and France. We have no troops to send, and if we had the troops we should lack equipment.

"Maybe it is all right for politicians to assume that an order for a rifle is the same thing as a rifle, but a doughboy never has been known to make that mistake."

Willkie said that on May 1 the army had only 38,000 of 241,000 needed semiautomatic rifles, with delivery of the others under present conditions impossible before 1941 or 1942. He said that as to artillery the army has only 141 of 1,400 modernized 75s needed and three of 3,800 60-millimeter mortars.

Tank equipment, with no heavy vehicles and only 10 of 700 light tanks now wanted, he called "almost ludicrous." He said that of 200 medium tanks wanted only 18 are on hand.

Similarly he cited figures which he said showed a serious lack of ammunition and of both planes and plane productive capacity.

Willkie warned that converting peacetime factory equipment to war purposes is a gigantic task requiring wide coöperation, minute knowledge of industry, and almost infinite planning.

Defaced by Vandals

Vandals who have been defacing the equestrian statue of Gen. John A. Logan for years are going to be taught a lesson by park police, it was announced last night by Robert J. Dunham, president of the park district. Gen. Logan established Memorial day while he was commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The civil war general's statue in Grant park at 9th street has been damaged more seriously than usual in the last year. Bronze lettering at the base and bronze parts of the statue have been pried off by thieves and sold for metal. Mr. Dunham said that the statue will be repaired and that it will hereafter be kept under watch by the park police.

LA GUARDIA PUT IN HOT SPOT BY WAR IN EUROPE

Political Support Tied to Axis Events.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 28.—The war in Europe has placed Mayor Fiorello La Guardia on a political hot spot in New York City.

Mayor Fiorello La Guardia.

In past elections the New York mayor has received the enthusiastic support of the communist and Italian voting blocs, but he is keeping quiet on the possibility of fifth column operations among these elements. Chairman Martin Dies [D., Tex.] of the congressional committee investigating un-American activities, recently charged both Dictators Stalin and Mussolini had operatives boring from within in the United States.

La Guardia, sometimes called the "sawed-off Mussolini" by his foes, insured his reëlection as Mayor in 1937 by tearing the hide off Hitler in several speeches. However, he has never opened his mouth specifically about Hitler's axis partner, Mussolini.

La Guardia in Middle.

If Mussolini steps into the European war on the side of Germany—and they were betting even money at the city hall today he would be in before June 15—the mayor will be caught between Italian sympathizers on one hand and pro-ally groups on the other. The red front backing La Guardia was demoralized by the German-soviet non-aggression pact just before war broke.

La Guardia, the son of an Italian father and Jewish mother, was a major in the American air force during the world war and served in Italy. Most of his time in Italy was spent in propaganda work. He went from city to city bolstering up Italian morale, persuading the people the Yanks were on their way.

Stanley Howe, the mayor's secretary, today said La Guardia was not mentioning the "fifth column" because he did not want to build "hysteria."

Says Precautions Taken.

"The mayor has gone about the business of taking practical precautions at the city's airports, docks, bridges. He has held conferences from time to time with the dock commissioner, police, and fire officials and other members of his cabinet with regard to protection of the people and property from possible enemies within our gates," explained Howe.

"But he has done it quietly as a matter of public duty and hasn't been making any speeches about the fifth column or any other subject that might stimulate emotional hysteria."

Howe said that restrictions on visits to hangars and administration offices at La Guardia field, the city's new airport, were imposed by the mayor yesterday. Public tours of hangars were canceled. These were precautions against sabotage and espionage, it was said.

City officials admitted a psychological problem might arise with the entry of Mussolini in the war since there are 1,500,000 Italian-Americans in the city, of whom 629,000 were born abroad. The Italian-Americans are second only to the Jews in number, with the latter having a population of nearly 3 million in the city.

La Guardia Aids Empires.

Altho he has not expressed himself on Il Duce, La Guardia has publicly backed up the cause of the empires in the war. He recently joined the interventionist organization, the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies. Last Sunday he warned the police to "assure" themselves of the patriotic backgrounds of organizations before joining them.

La Guardia, who has been at times a Republican, Socialist, Roosevelt supporter [still is], now is an enrolled member of the radical American Labor party. After the Stalin-Hitler pact the party split. Communists, however, won a bitter fight to retain control of the party organization in New York county.

Michael Quill, radical czar of the C. I. O. Transport Workers' union, was defeated for reëlection to the city council last fall when he refused to subscribe to a resolution denouncing the Stalin-Hitler pact. He was beaten, altho La Guardia refused to oppose him openly, as right wing labor party members demanded. In fact, it is reported La Guardia toyed with the idea of indorsing Quill.

DEMANDS BETTER ROADS AS PART OF DEFENSE PLAN

Other Armament Moves in Illinois Legislature.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 28.—The Illinois legislature and the executive branch of the state government took note of the war today with a series of activities relating to national defense.

Rep. Frank Ryan.

Legislators considered resolutions urging the construction of a motor research laboratory in Illinois, the building of superhighways, for military purposes, and the better equipping of the National Guard. A suggested drive against fifth columns in the state failed of support.

The executive department's move came thru Attorney General John E. Cassidy, who addressed a letter to the 102 state's attorneys advising them that Illinois criminal statutes cover treasonous acts.

The upper chamber of the legislature adopted the resolution of Senator William J. Connors [D., Chicago] memorializing congress to locate in Illinois a projected $12,000,000 research laboratory to study basic problems in internal combustion engines. The resolution cited advantages of Illinois transportation and auxiliary industries and its location remote from the threat of attack by an invading enemy.

Superhighway System Urged.

Representative Frank Ryan [D., Chicago] introduced a resolution memorializing congress and directing the Illinois highway department to prosecute construction of superhighways for their military value. He pointed out that the German army today has a superhighway system deep behind its lines while the allies lack similar roadways in the interior of France.

The Ryan resolution mentioned a study published two years ago by the United States bureau of public roads, recommending a national system of superhighways, including five cross state routes in Illinois. The war department coöperated in this study. It concluded that wartime needs are identical with peacetime needs for fast and safe motor transportation and that the hazards and delays of inadequate pavements are most acute in metropolitan areas. The resolution was referred to the executive committee.

Demands Arms for Soldiers.

Representative George S. Brydia [R., Prophetstown] asked for a legislative inquiry into inadequate armament of the Illinois National Guard. He suggested that the state might assist in equipping its unit of the army, if Washington continues its neglect, rather than to send the sons of Illinois to war without modern arms. His resolution, also referred to the executive committee, asked that the military affairs committee of the house report to the assembly and to the government as to the cost of 10 75-ton tanks and 10 bombing planes.

The house, after passing the advancing bills of minor importance, agreed to a perfunctory session tomorrow to be followed by a recess until Tuesday. Before adjournment for the day, Benjamin Adamowski [D., Chicago] introduced a resolution to call a referendum election next November on a proposition to amend the constitution, reapportioning representation in the assembly.

Unchanged Since 1901.

The last reapportionment of legislative districts under the present provision of the 1870 constitution was in 1901. By overriding the constitution, downstate has a majority in both houses. If the constitution were to be obeyed, Cook county would have a majority in both houses.

The senate advanced the Chicago Sanitary district's $5,000,000 pegged levy bill and the old age pension bill to third reading, the passage stage, for tomorrow's calendar. Both measures are expected to be acted on in the morning.

GOVERNOR ASKED TO HEAR CHARGE OF SALES TAX FIX

New Note Follows Refusal to Meet Committee.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 28.—Politely worded criticisms were exchanged today between Gov. Henry Horner's sickroom regency and a house committee investigating waste and corruption in the administration of the invalid chief executive. In the exchange, a new charge of sales tax fixing was raised.

Representative Searle.

In the forenoon, a letter bearing the name of Gov. Horner was received by the committee, rebuffing a request for a mansion conference. In the afternoon Representative Clinton Searle [R., Rock Island], chairman of the investigators, sent a second letter to the governor, renewing the request for an interview.

Again Asks Audience.

"We would like to help you conserve your strength in every possible manner," read the Searle letter, "but it occured to us that the impending breakdown in the financial structure of the state is of sufficient importance to warrant your personal attention.

"In addition there has come to the attention of the committee evidence of the existence of a 'sales-tax-fix-ring' in Illinois, resulting in a serious drainage in state revenues. We had intended to ask your coöperation in exposing and clearing up this situation.

"In view of the foregoing, and despite our realization of the serious condition of your health, we feel impelled again to request the privilege of an audience with you."

Governor's Letter of Refusal.

"Your committee, created to study state finance," read the Horner letter, "has had the past four weeks to collect data and other pertinent material. Directors and other officials have coöperated with you wholeheartedly. You now have in your possession all the fiscal data I could supply."

The committee this afternoon quizzed A. L. Bowen, indicted director of the department of public welfare, about the expenses of his department.

The senate this evening created a new board of inquiry—to ask Finance Director Samuel L. Nudelman, head of the governor's cabinet, why $30,000 appropriated for the Southern Illinois Normal university at Carbondale is being withheld. It has been reported the money is being withheld because the Hornerites do not want Senator R. G. Crisenberry [R., Murphysboro] to get credit for doing something for the school.

Lieut. Gov. John Stelle appointed to this board five senators, all independent of the Horner-Nash-Kelly machine — Crisenberry [R.], Wallace Karraker [D., Jonesboro], Melvin Thomas [D., Charleston], T. MacDowning [R., Macomb], and Joseph E. Heckenkamp [D., Paris]. Senator Harold G. Ward [D., Chicago], Kelly's floor leader, lost by a vote of 25 to 19 in a move to kill this inquiry.

GIRL WHO BALKED AT PUBLIC SHOWER LOSES SCHOOL SUIT

Los Angeles, Cal., May 28 (AP).—A 16 year old high school girl who refused to take shower baths in the presence of other girl students lost her $10,000 damage suit against the Alhambra school board today and her fight to have her expulsion order revoked.

Superior Judge Roy V. Rhodes, in ruling against Joan Aveline Lawrence, quoted medical and psychiatric authority that "under the group system a much healthier atmosphere [than under the old individual shower system] was engendered . . . which tends to reduce sex consciousness."

SONSTEBY RAKED BY JUDGE GREEN AFTER HEARING

Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby of the Municipal court was standing in the door of his chambers yesterday when Judge Thomas A. Green approached. Judge Green, as a member of the Municipal bench, serves under Judge Sonsteby.

"I want to thank you, judge," Green told his chief justice ironically. "I think you're a perfect heel."

Judge Sonsteby turned away.

"I wouldn't take your word for anything," Green continued. "Why do you stand there and take it?"

"I try to be a gentleman," Sonsteby responded.

One of His Outbursts, Says Sonsteby.

When Judge Green had departed the chief justice of the Municipal court was asked what official cognizance he would take of Judge Green's denunciation.

"It's just one of his periodical outbursts," he said gently. "You must consider the source."

The debate climaxed a chamber hearing before Judge Sonsteby in which a new trial was denied to Miss Emily Ranus, who had been committed to Dwight women's prison for a year for use and possession of narcotics. Judge Green was present at the hearing.

Her attorney, H. Meyer Simborg, said she was cured of the narcotics habit and advanced legal reasons for a new trial. He said that if she obtained her freedom she would be married to Dr. Henry J. Millstone. The doctor nodded in agreement.

Freed of Adultery Charges.

Miss Ranus and Dr. Millstone were freed of adultery charges brought by his wife in 1931. Mrs. Millstone later was granted a divorce on charges of cruelty. In 1934 Dr. Millstone and Miss Ranus were acquitted by a jury on charges of conspiracy to blackmail physicians.

During the hearing on the narcotics charge Judge Green said he had become interested in the matter because he was acquainted with Dr. Millstone and the girl. He said the Ranus family and a representative of the state's attorney's office had agreed to the release and the marriage if the girl was cured of the narcotics habit.

Joseph B. Callahan, representing the federal narcotics bureau, told the hearing a narcotics charge is pending against Dr. Millstone. He said that whether Miss Ranus would be called as a witness would depend upon the facts in the case.

Judge Green muttered that the hearing was a "three ring circus" and said he would withdraw if a criminal prosecution was involved.

Another Full-Bodied Historical Novel: "Stars on the Sea."

BOOKS

New Historical Novel Is Full of Adventure

"Stars on the Sea," by F. van Wyck Mason. (Lippincott, 720 pages, $2.75.) Published today.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

The author of the very popular "Three Harbours" has written another full-bodied, vigorous tale of the days of the revolutionary war, "a companion piece, but not a sequel," to its predecessor. That it is also long and lusty goes almost without saying, for it has become common practice for historical novelists to give their readers lengthy, buxom volumes filled with details of their characters' lives, their characters' fight for liberty, as well as their characters' not always successful pursuit of happiness. And as for heroines, the hussy is unquestionably the favorite type since Scarlett O'Hara painted a whole book to match her name.

"Stars on the Sea" lavishes the avid reader of historical novels with everything that he likes best. Its action covers important and vividly contrasting sections and ways of life of the western continent in 1775-'77. Its hero starts out as a soldier in the tyro Rhode Island army and ends as a volunteer in the young continental navy. Its heroine is forced by fate into tragic melodrama. The horrors of war are intermingled with some hectic gayeties. True love, sadly tried thru the 720 pages, emerges triumphant, but not wholly fulfilled as the hero rededicates himself to his country and declares in leaving his beloved: "Some one must suffer such a sacrifice if these United States are to survive."

The action opens in 1775 in Boston harbor when young John Bennett, late "junior sophister of Rhode Island college," is a part of the small army made up of badly unified units. Enlistment, either by the calendar or the lunar month, is a major matter to the members of that army; and when, to fulfill a demand of his sweetheart's family, John insists on being dismissed on the lunar basis, he finds plenty to call him deserter.

When the British lay low the island of Conanicut, near Newport, and his family fortunes are wrecked, young John sails to far places on a privateer. In the Bahamas he finds a state of life so cruel as to be unbearable to him. In Charleston he finds a gentle mode of living, but life there no less menaced by war than in New England.

The heroine, John's sister, suffers almost more than can be borne even by a strong-willed girl, confident of her luck. Her luck is, indeed, phenomenal, but it only serves to point her tragedy the more poignantly. She, too, sees contrasting ways of life in Rhode Island, in South Carolina, and in pioneer Kentucky.

In "Stars on the Sea" war is brought home to all individuals from the combatants who experienced it with their life blood, thru those less directly concerned, and into remote islands whose trade alone suffers. But none goes untouched. Can Mr. Mason have intended to point a moral as well as to entertain with this vast panorama of historic adventure?

Timely British History

"Empire of the Seven Seas," by James Truslow Adams. Scribners, $3.50.]

Altho this book was intended as the concluding volume to a two volume popular history of the British empire, the first part of which was published in 1938 with the title "Building the British Empire," events have given it an almost immediate interest and Mr. Adams' statement about the overthrow of the British empire an almost news commentary timeliness.

"Not only would it leave," he writes, "a vacuum over a quarter of the globe into which all the winds of anarchy, despotism, and spiritual oppression would rush, but the strongest bulwark outside ourselves for our own safety and freedom would be destroyed."

Mr. Adams is one of America's most careful and scholarly historians, as well as one of our most popular ones. He has always frankly admired the British and nowhere is his admiration more frankly stated than in this survey of the years 1784-1939.

But he does not minimize England's mistakes, her greed of empire, nor her long misrule of Ireland, while he writes stirringly about the undaunted, bulldoglike tenacity with which she withstood—part of the time deserted by her allies—the onslaughts of Napoleon and finally sent him to Elba.

The period immediately following the loss of the American colonies was England's nadir, the author shows. From that period there emerged not only the greatest empire in the world, which Mr. Adams describes as "the greatest political factor in the modern world," but also, he points out, the greatest republic in the world, to live with a part of that empire, in such mutual trust that not one dollar is spent for mutual defense by either of the two great countries of Canada and the United States.

The character of its rule rather than its might is responsible for the British empire, Mr. Adams asserts, and he does an excellent job of analyzing that character—political, social, economic, and individual.

Re-Creates Past

F. Van Wyck Mason, author of "Stars on the Sea," a long historical novel reviewed today by Fanny Butcher.

'The Lights Go Down' Is Story of a Nazi Town

"The Lights Go Down," by Erika Mann. [Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50.]

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

You could find the counterpart of the town in this book almost anywhere in Germany. There was the inevitable market square, surrounded by shops and dwellings, by the churches, the hotel, and the old Gothic inn. It was a small town, about 5,000 population. It had a university and some industries. It was the German Middletown.

And now it is Middletown, Nazi version, described by Erika Mann, talented daughter of Thomas Mann, Germany's most illustrious modern literary figure, now a voluntary exile in this country with his family. Miss Mann calls the story of Nazi Middletown "The Lights Go Down." In view of the blitzkrieg sweeping Europe, she might have called it "The Lights Go Down and Out."

This book should be read more as a sociological document than as a novel, because the thread-of plot is so slim that it scarcely exists. There are ten chapters and a prologue in which an American visitor comes to "our city." In each chapter Miss Mann tells the story of a citizen of the city or his family, and how life in the Third Reich affects them.

In an appendix, Miss Mann states that she has created the average man in each group out of her own experience, as well as out of thousands of documents. The facts, she says, are true. If so, the home front in Hitler's Germany is a weak, trembling structure, a pitiful makeshift, ready to crack once the might of the German arms is overturned. This insecurity extends not only thru the workers and peasants, who scramble for a meager living, but up thru the regimented ranks of the industrialists and the professional men, into the Nazi party men themselves.

Some of the most memorable episodes are those of Pastor Gebhardt, who escaped from prison; Franz Deiglmeyer, district supervisor of the Gestapo who paid with his life for warning Jews of a new pogrom; Frau Murks, waiting patiently for the return of her eldest son from the sea; Eberhardt, writer of virile hunting stories until he made one slip; Marie and Peter, the young lovers, and Dr. Scherbach, the great surgeon.

Gives Philosophy

"The Price of Freedom," by Eve Curie. [Doubleday-Doran, $1; paper bound, 50 cents.] Published last Friday.

Eve Curie, author of her mother's life story, "Madame Curie," one of the great biographies of our day, gave a farewell talk recently in New York just before she returned to France on the Clipper. That brief talk so deeply moved her audience that "The Price of Freedom" has been rushed into print.

The book is only 32 pages long. In it is the sincere gratitude of a lovely woman for gentlenesses and kindnesses, for American friendliness. In it are moments of engaging femininity, when she talks of "the newest, the loveliest hat Paris has invented for the spring."

But the talk's solid foundation is a heroic, noble calm, a statement, beautifully made and obviously deeply believed, that "I am going back to the most serene, to the calmest country in the world." In it is the extraordinary, courageous, and thought stirring conviction that "at the present time fear is not with the belligerent nations any more, with the countries which are fighting, which are menaced. There is no fear in Britain, in France, probably no fear in Germany. Extraordinarily enough, fear has gone somewhere else—to the countries which are not fighting, which are not menaced, to the countries 'at peace.'"

Eve Curie's personal statement of that phenomenon was tremendously moving. The printed reiteration of it, by its simplicity and deep sincerity, deeply will move her readers.

2 Biographies, Both Stories of Unique People

"Brother, Here's a Man!", by Kim Beattie. [Macmillan, $2.50.] Published yesterday.

"Stranger in the House," by Howard Coxe. [Greystone Press, $2.50.] Published last Thursday.

BY EDITH WEIGLE.

These two books, one about Caroline of Brunswick, queen consort of George IV. of England, the other about Joe Boyle, "King of the Klondike," have one thing in common. They are both biographies of unique people. Caroline's life was "one of absolute and unmitigated waste. The spectacle of her misadventures is unique." Boyle's career was one so crammed full of action and daring that reports of his deeds sound like a Munchausen tale.

In "Brother, Here's a Man," Kim Beattie tells of the amazing adventures of a Canadian who made a fortune in the gold rush days of 1897 to 1914 ["current belief was that he personally amassed at least 13 million"]; got together a Yukon machine gun battery to fight with the allies in the world war; served on the allied mission in Russia, where he led a charmed life during the revolution, and aided in the escape of Grand Duchess Marie and a number of White Russians; rescued the crown jewels, archives, and reserve cash of Rumania from the hands of the Reds in Moscow and concealed them, taking them in safety to Jassy, and earning thereby the undying gratitude of Queen Marie, and sailed for the Crimea, where he would have aided the escape of the czar's mother, sister of Queen Alexandra of England, but she refused, saying she could not leave her people.

He became the counselor of Queen Marie of Rumania, who wrote a preface to Mr. Beattie's book shortly before her death. But in the end he spent his last days in poverty. Now he is almost a legendary figure, a folk hero who defied nature and man.

Howard Coxe writes in lively, easy-to-read vein of the poor Caroline, who arrived in England to marry the prince of Wales, only to find that he was in love with Lady Jersey, appointed as her lady in waiting. Being young and optimistic, the bride thought she could win "Prinney," as he was called, away from this shrewd and calculating woman, and that he would even forget his morganatic wife, Maria Fitzherbert.

But once she had become a mother he was off to better fields. His dissolute ways annoyed his father, the king, who was fond of Caroline, but were tolerated by his doting mother, who was jealous of her daughter-in-law. Little Charlotte, Caroline's baby, was taken away from her, she was forbidden to enter Carlton House, except once a week when she was permitted to see the child, and she was continually spied upon by friends of the prince.

Her own good nature, fun loving and humorous, was sorely tried. A good income and the love of the English people were her chief comforts until she adopted a little boy, William, whom she called Willikins. She had already taken nine slum children to rear and train for trades.

While the king lived Caroline's life was not too miserable, but when he died, and her husband, who hated her, succeeded him, her lot was indeed unfortunate. The book describes her later years in great detail.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

Followers of this young Kentucky author, Jesse Stuart, will know after the first chapter that this, his fourth book and second novel, is his greatest work. It offers even greater promise than did "Beyond Dark Hills," which followed his book of short stories and his volume of collected verse.

An abrupt departure in fiction prose, this novel is in the present tense thruout. The reader will be somewhat startled at first, perhaps, but it is likely he soon will accept enthusiastically this clear, swift blitzprose.

Here is the Kentucky country again with its hard, earthy people. They are not picturesque, as such; they are true, heroic, hilarious, and deadly.

This is the bright hate of old Anse Bushman, who ruled with a club, and Boliver Tussie, the amiable, tobacco chewing, whisky drinking squatter, who held grimly to the tract of land Old Anse coveted.

It is a romance that reaches heights in the love of Tarvin Bushman for Subrinea Tussie. And there is much here that has been overlooked by other writers of southern books; overlooked because they never had lived it.

THE FATE OF THE DARMENYS - - - By Elizabeth York Miller

[Copyright: 1940: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

SYNOPSIS.

Madge Darmeny, knowing she has only a few months to live, sends for her family so she can select an heir. She has no children and the only people living with her are Amelia Pennyfeather, a dependent relative, and Shirley Westall, her secretary. Her nearest relative is her niece, Leda, who is married to her husband's nephew, Frank. Eight year old Betsy, Frank's child and Leda's step-child, is spending her vacation with Madge. But Madge's favorite relative seems to be Geoffry, a cousin of Frank's and another nephew of her husband's. She tells Alfred Barnes, a lifelong friend and her solicitor, that she intends to have all these people come and live with her so she can find out which will be the most deserving heir.

INSTALMENT III.

DIAMONDS FROM A FRIEND.

Frank, the younger of the Darmeny men, was the first to arrive at Beechbourne Park. Arlington, the public school at which he was classics master, lay 60 miles from Crane's Wood, as the motor runs. During term time Frank Darmeny had to live in the precincts of the school. He had a charming little house, but the academic life irked his new wife, and she spent no more time at Arlington than she could manage. It had been two months since Frank had even seen her.

He was glad to be coming to Crane's Wood. Dr. Roger Westall, his old college tutor, recently retired because of ill health, had taken a cottage in the village. They were great friends, tho of late they had met infrequently.

Frank arrived in a battered little car with ancient luggage thrown in all anyhow, and his fishing rods and golf sticks standing up conspicuously behind. He was clad in slacks and a yellow pullover, and he had reddish hair and freckles, and a pugnaciously good humored face. In build he was a young giant, a physically perfect specimen. He came absent mindedly into Madge Darmeny's dainty drawing room with a pipe in his mouth, but he remembered in time to withdraw it and thrust it into a pocket.

Nobody was there, tho, except Amelia Pennyfeather, who said she would tell Mrs. Darmeny. But a second later Betsy bounded in, dragging Shirley Westall after her.

"Daddy!" she screamed. "O, my darling, darling daddy!"

She leapt on him as tho climbing a tree.

"Still dramatizing, eh?" He kissed her affectionately.

"Do we know each other?" he asked.

The color deepened in Shirley's cheeks.

"We used to know each other quite well," she said reproachfully.

"But it was a long time ago. I'm Shirley Westall. I think I was about 12 when last we met, and you were still at Oxford."

"God bless my soul," Frank cried. "It simply isn't possible! You take my breath away."

"Why? Because I've grown up?"

"That you've grown into such a beauty, Shirley. You were one of the plainest children I think I ever saw."

"You'll probably grow up the other way," her father told her.

He shook Shirley by both hands, and she laughed with embarrassment.

"But I ought to have guessed," he said. "Aunt Madge wrote me that she had hired you for something or other. How very nice to see you again. And how's your old man? I'm going to call on him this afternoon."

"He's not too well," Shirley said. "But don't let him know you notice any change. You can't imagine how he's looking forward to seeing you."

They both turned as Madge Darmeny trailed into the room. She looked cool and fresh in lavender muslin, but thinner and more delicate than at Christmas, which was the last time Frank had seen her. He stared at her with concern after they had greeted each other.

"Now don't try any of your candid camera tricks on me," she said, with some asperity. "I've lost a little weight, but I'm all right. Where's your wife?"

"Quite honestly, I don't know. She's been in town for the season and I haven't set eyes on her for ages."

"Who's fault is that?"

Frank smiled. "You'd better ask Leda. She'll turn up before long. I believe Geoffrey is motoring her down."

"Geoffrey?" Madge asked, a little bewildered. "But he's sold his car."

"You mean that one? O, yes, he did sell the roadster. Wasn't powerful enough, Leda tells me. He bought another awhile back."

Madge stifled an exclamation, but after all, Geoffrey was her darling, and the poor boy didn't know as yet what was going to happen to him.

"Well, I think lunch is ready," she said. "O, yes—here's Gibson come to tell us. We might as well go in."

Geoffrey Darmeny and Frank's wife did not arrive until nearly teatime. Altho Beechbourne was vast and she was a small woman, Leda seemed to fill it with her expressive personality.

Dark, with olive coloring, there was a foreign look about her, due, no doubt, to her mother, who had been half Spanish. She was altogether enchanting, with her graphic, airy gestures, and sparkled with the tale of some adventure which had delayed them on the road.

"Aunt Madge, it is a treat to see you—so lovely as always, too. Just look at her, Geoffrey—did you ever see anything so perfect as our darling, Auntie Madge?"

"Seldom, if ever," he said.

"I'm your husband," said Frank, "in case you've forgotten me, Leda."

"Darling, don't be unkind! But where on earth did you get that yellow woolen thing you're wearing? Upon my soul, Frank, you seem to go out of your way to acquire spectacular clothing."

Frank gave a warning cough, and Amelia Pennyfeather—hovering like a bird of ill omen in the background—croaked reproachfully: "I knitted that pullover for him for Christmas, Leda."

"O, Amelia, did you?" Nothing ever fazed Leda Darmeny. "How frightfully clever of you! I never could learn to knit to save my soul."

Shirley Westall, also a little in the background, wondered if she shouldn't efface herself completely. But Mrs. Darmeny had asked her to lunch at Beechbourne, as she usually did; and Shirley, too, was fascinated by Leda.

"Mummy, you've got a new bracelet," said Betsy, who had been exploring her stepmother with admiring but slightly critical eyes. There was an unacknowledged sense of antagonism between those two. Perhaps Betsy was a little jealous of Leda's air of owning the earth.

"O, yes, darling. It's nothing, really."

"Let me see, mummy. O, how pretty—a chain of diamond daisies. O, I love it!"

"Run away, darling, and don't bother. Mummy wants to talk to Auntie Madge and daddy, and everybody . . . "

Madge Darmeny stiffened as tho something had shot up her spine.

"It is a pretty bracelet, Leda," she said. "And it must have cost a pretty penny. Did Frank give it to you?"

"Darling, if you must know, the stones aren't real, and I gave it to myself."

"Nonsense, Leda, don't take me for a fool. I know real diamonds when I see them." Madge's voice, tho soft, held an undertone of ice. "At a rough guess, I'd say you paid about 1,200 pounds for that bauble—if you did buy it yourself. And the setting is unmistakably Grandet's."

"You win, darling!" she laughed gaily. 'Only I didn't want Frank to know. But it doesn't really matter. To tell the truth, Marta Shotts, my girl pal, gave it to me."

There was a suspended sort of silence.

Then Betsy said, in a tone of pained reminiscence, "It takes courage to tell the truth, Auntie Madge says. It's harder to do sometimes than cutting your finger on purpose."

"Do hark at that child! Where on earth does she get her ideas from?"

"If you're going up to your room, Leda," said Frank, "I'll come along."

Authors and Their Work

Sinclair Lewis was in town last week on his way to New York from Hollywood, so intrigued with the stage that he talked about little else. He had just sent off the manuscript of a play to his agent. His next novel, like "Bethel Merriday," will be about the stage. There will have to be Hollywood in it, of course, he said, but the Hollywood today, when it is considered a little traitorous of actors to go on the legitimate stage, ungrateful of them to desert the benefactors who made them what they are today, not the Hollywood to which the great of the stage in an earlier day used to feel they were selling themselves for gold. And summer stock will be in it, of course, to which Mr. Lewis is himself returning this year as an actor. After that novel he will write another political one. But all the time he will keep on writing plays—like Thornton Wilder, who declares he will never write another novel.

2 BANDITS SLAIN, POLICEMAN SHOT IN OFFICE HOLDUP

One Gunman Identified as Bank Robber.

A tattooed bandit shot to death by policemen after a $700 daylight holdup yesterday was identified last night as Joseph Schiro, 27 years old, a New Orleans bank robber who came to the Chicago underworld two months ago. Schiro's companion in the holdup also was slain. His body remained unidentified in the county morgue.

The two bandits were trapped in their flight from the Cragin Building and Loan association, 5200 Fullerton avenue. The swift arrival of two policemen and the courage of a young woman employé, who sounded the alarm and was used as a shield by the gunmen as they fled, was responsible for their being shot down a few yards from the association offices.

Girl Burned by Bullet.

The heroic young woman, Miss Helen Skweres, 28 years old, 5004 Windsor avenue, suffered a burn on the left arm from a bullet, but otherwise was uninjured. Charles Routh, 56, of 3843 Bernard street, a Checker taxi driver whom the bandits forced to accompany them to the loan association, was struck on the head with a pistol by one of the robbers.

Schiro's body was identified by Bert Barnts, 4921 Augusta boulevard, husband of the dead man's cousin. New Orleans police reported that Schiro and four others were convicted in 1932 of the $3,468 robbery of the St. Bernard branch of the Canal Bank and Trust company. Schiro recently was released from prison.

The gunmen telephoned for a cab from a tavern at 5921 Irving Park road and when Routh arrived he ordered him to drive them to the loan office. On the way they donned gloves, drew guns, and threatened Routh. They forced him out of the cab across the street from the office and one of them struck him when he was slow in moving.

Money Put in Strongbox.

In the office were Miss Skweres, the secretary; John J. Belter, 7024 Oriole avenue, vice president of the association; John F. Thomas, 3105 North Lotus avenue, another employé, and Adam Moran, 5126 Grand avenue, a customer. Miss Skweres became suspicious as the bandits and Routh entered and pressed the burglar alarm button.

Frustrates Holdup

(Story in adjoining column.)

Miss Helen Skweres, who gave alarm when building and loan office was held up.

The bandits, guns drawn, leaped over a marble counter and forced Belter to give them $700, which one of them placed in a strongbox. Belter, Thomas, Moran, and Routh were forced to lie down in the rear of the office.

Meanwhile the burglar alarm had been received at the Cragin station, 4904 Grand avenue, and Policeman Magner and Charles Kersting sped to the loan office, three quarters of a mile away, in a squad car.

The gunmen thrust Miss Skweres before them as a shield and moved toward the front door. The policemen fired thru a glass partition, then backed up as the bandits came into the open street, forcing Miss Skweres ahead of them.

Bandits Return Fire.

The police fired again, and the bandits returned the shots and separated, one still behind Miss Skweres. Kersting shot this bandit in the head and as the bandit fell he pulled Miss Skweres to the ground.

From across the street the other bandit fired, wounding Magner. Magner fired back as he fell, killing the second gunman with a bullet in the abdomen.

Magner, who is 40 years old, lives at 5242 Lieb avenue and has been on the police force 15 years. Kersting, who is 51, has been on the force for 25 years and lives at 7104 Armitage avenue.

BODY FOUND ON BEACH.

The body of a man about 45 years old which had been in the water for several months was found on the beach last night near Dune Park, Ind. Dr. Carl M. Davis, coroner of Porter county, said severe injuries to the skull suggested the possibility of murder.

U. S. COURT VOIDS DEATH SENTENCE OF KIDNAP KILLER

New Trial Is Ordered for Oklahoma Outlaw.

Jack Russell, the Oklahoma outlaw who was sentenced to death for the kidnap murder of William Scott Hamilton, a Kansas milling salesman, was granted a new trial yesterday when the United States Circuit Court of Appeals reversed his conviction of last Nov. 22.

The reversal was ordered on the ground that a federal fingerprint record card which was given to the jury as an exhibit was improper evidence. A notation in red ink on the reverse of the card showed a previous arrest for rape. The defense contended that this would have had a prejudicial effect on the seven women on the jury.

Judge Evans Dissents.

Presiding Judge Evan A. Evans, who dissented from the majority opinion of Judges Walter E. Treanor and J. Earl Major, contended that despite a showing of reversible error it would be "humanly impossible for a new trial to result differently" and that the verdict should be allowed to stand.

The jury, which tried Russell before Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward, was the first containing both men and women ever asked to inflict the death penalty in Cook county.

Russell escaped last July 11 from the Oklahoma state penitentiary in McAlester, where he was serving a term for robbery. He said he fled because of an overwhelming desire to see his wife, Mary, of 6527 Kimbark avenue.

Body Left in Field.

Evidence at the trial showed that, while on the way to Chicago Russell kidnaped Hamilton near Pittsburg, Kas. They drove to a lane near Ringwood, in McHenry county, where Hamilton was shot to death July 14 and his body left in a field. Hamilton was 23 years old and lived in Arkansas City, Kas.

After the slaying Russell went to Kenosha, Wis., and then doubled back southwest. He was seized five days later in a tourist camp in Cass, Ark. He confessed the killing but asserted the shooting occurred when he dozed off and Hamilton tried to seize his gun.

Russell has been held in the county jail on a series of stays deferring his execution, which originally was set for Jan. 5.

SPECTACLE LENS MAKERS INDICTED ON TRUST CHARGE

Price Fixing Alleged in U. S. Counts.

New York, May 28 (AP).—Leading manufacturers and distributors of the American optical industry were accused in federal indictments today of violating antitrust laws by fixing prices and restraining trade thru vast illegal combinations.

A federal grand jury returned bills against 14 manufacturers said to produce 95 per cent of all spectacle lenses in this country, five wholesalers, three trade associations and 21 individuals.

The indictments also accused them of maintaining artificially high prices by joint effort and of employing noncompetitive methods of distribution.

Second Optical Drive.

This was the second move by the government in the optical field in two months. In the previous case, the Bausch and Lomb Optical company of Rochester, N. Y., and the Carl Zeiss companies of Germany and New York were indicted for antitrust law violations in the manufacture and sale of precision lenses for military use.

Bausch & Lomb, named in two of today's indictments, pleaded no defense yesterday to the earlier charge, and it and three of its officers were fined $10,000 each. Their counsel said they admitted no wrongdoing but made the plea "to avoid the time and expense of a trial when the necessity of their services is so great."

Charge Price Fixing.

In one indictment returned today the manufacturers were charged with fixing spectacle lens prices to wholesalers and retailers and with agreeing to fix resale prices from wholesalers to retailers.

In another, wholesale distributors and associations were accused of fixing prices of second quality prescription lenses sold and distributed in metropolitan New York, northern New York areas, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and the District of Columbia.

A third indictment accused three manufacturers of spectacle lenses and frames of agreeing to classify persons claiming to be optical wholesalers by designating the secretary-manager of the Optical Wholesalers' National association, Inc., to prepare a list of those eligible.

Charges Arbitrary List.

The government contended the list was arbitrarily prepared and was used by the American Optical company of Southbridge, Mass., in deciding who should be entitled to purchase certain patented frames and mountings at wholesale prices from nearly every manufacturer in the United States.

An alleged threat of a price war was attributed to the American Optical company in a fourth indictment which charged a group of frame makers with fixing prices on unpatented frames as a result of the purported threat.

The Continental Optical company of Indianapolis was named as a defendant in the lens indictment.

Defendants in the indictment against wholesalers included: Frank M. Kreissl, Chicago zone manager for the American Optical company of Southbridge, Mass.; Ben A. Ramaker-Riggs Optical Company, Consolidated, of Chicago, and Roy Whetmore, president; White-Haines Optical company of Cleveland, and Daniel D. Hubbell, president.

BLOW SAFE; SEIZE RENT MONEY.

GET SET

for a Real adventure!

Come on—let's go—for there's an experience waiting for you not far away—that you'll long remember.

It's a bottle of beer—but that doesn't tell the half of it. It's beer with a glorious flavor, a tantalizing tang, a lively perfection such as you have never tasted before.

It's a beer fit for those great occasions of life that call for something special—it's an even finer Schlitz.

But wait. There's something more—for this even finer Schlitz is brought to you with all its original flavor—protected from the effect of air.

And that's great news! Air is beer's worst enemy. Even the small amount in the neck of the bottle can attack the life and flavor of beer.

Now Schlitz has perfected a process to eliminate that air—to remove it an instant before the beer is bottled.

So Schlitz—shielded from the effect of air—stays flavor-fresh right up to the moment you drink it. Just notice that life and sparkle as it foams into your glass and gathers a proud, high collar of frosty white. Just taste that extra goodness of this fresh and glorious beer.

But why waste words when you could be drinking it now? Drop in somewhere nearby and get set for a real adventure.

Getting Acquainted

with Schlitz Beer requires no period of taste adjustment. The things you miss in its flavor are the bitterness or over-sweetness that are never to be found in this truly great, dry beer. Your first bottle—even your first sip—will tell you that Schlitz is your kind of beer—exactly.

PROTECTED!

The space you see in the Schlitz bottle is not air but the breath of the beer itself. The famous flavor of Schlitz is never changed from the day it leaves the brewery.

FOR GREAT OCCASIONS AN EVEN FINER

BLUM, MacDONALD, AND THE NEW DEAL.

The grave news from Europe ought to give pause to those who have been trying to rush this country, unprepared as it is, into the war. The day's budget of domestic news ought to serve further to dampen the ardor of the war-hawks. It is all too clear that this country is in the Blum-MacDonald period.

The same papers which reported the surrender of King Leopold told of the United States Supreme court decision in the Apex Hosiery case. A manufacturing company had been the victim of a particularly inexcusable and violent sit-down strike. The company had sued under the Sherman law for triple damages, alleging an illegal conspiracy on the part of the union to interfere with the flow of interstate commerce. The company had won in the lower court, but the verdict was reversed in the Supreme court on the ground that, tho the offense was grave, it did not fall within the terms of the Sherman act.

Chief Justice Hughes and two of his associates dissented. It is not necessary at this point to discuss the opposing views of the law; the point which needs to be stressed is that the company saw only a slim chance, if any, of obtaining justice under the state laws of Pennsylvania and has now discovered that the federal code offers no protection whatsoever against violent and conscienceless interruptions of industrial production.

Just as in France under Blum, and in Britain under MacDonald, our federal government is all sail and no anchor. Our recent legislation has all been directed at establishing the right to disrupt the economy of the country and lessen its productivity. Unions are encouraged to prevent the training of young men in the more intricate trades. Hours of labor even in the armament industries are narrowly restricted. The federal government has disrupted the coal industry and the power industry, and encouraged revolutionaries to organize the basic metal trades and the motor factories.

The objection is not to unionization but to the encouragement of violent and subversive unionization. Mr. Roosevelt has opened the door of industry to the fifth column, just as Blum and MacDonald did in their countries, and has taken no steps to impose restraint and regard for the common danger and common welfare upon those he has raised to power. The federal government has assumed jurisdiction over the milk industry, but under Mr. Roosevelt does nothing to maintain the milk supply of Chicago. His Supreme court has said that virtually all industrial labor is subject to federal regulation, but his laws are all directed against the employer, whose chief desire is to make and sell more goods; none of the laws discourage interruptions of production by men of violence acting under the guise of labor leaders.

The latest of the New Deal laws is the La Follette bill which, even with its amendments, is still vicious legislation. It forbids the employer to take any effective steps to combat a strike, no matter how unjustified the strike may be, no matter how unpopular it may be with the rank and file of the employés, and no matter what forms of terrorism are employed by the pickets. Here is another evidence that the New Deal is determined to make it as easy as possible for the communist fifth column to disrupt industry.

A VEST POCKET RESTORED TO CIRCULATION.

About the only consolation to be found in the discovery that Frank V. Zintak has popped up on the city pay roll, with $5,364 a year in salary and perquisites, is the fact that summer is almost here.

In view of the season, Mr. Zintak may be persuaded to leave his vest at home, if and when he comes to work. This would be a great relief to Commissioner Hewitt and Controler Upham, who have to see that some $500,000 a year under Mr. Zintak's control is spent honestly. Mr. Zintak is not the kind of fellow one likes to see equipped with vest pockets.

The last time any one looked in Mr. Zintak's vest pocket $22,560 wasn't there. He was fired as clerk of the Superior court, in which capacity he had accumulated the funds in his vest pocket, and kicked off the Democratic ticket. The books of his office proved to have been altered in an attempt to conceal the embezzlement, and by paying back the money he indicated where it had gone in the first place.

The first time Mr. Zintak was tried he was saved by a hung jury, and a prominent but slightly dumb citizen got himself indicted on a charge of jury fixing as a result. The citizen was acquitted. The second jury acquitted Zintak, and then it was discovered that there may have been some connection between its members' leniency and their escape from the humdrum life of the jury quarters for a week-end tavern tour. Eleven of the jurors were sentenced to jail for contempt of court.

Mr. Zintak got an acquittal, but it would be overstraining the English language to call it a vindication. Mayor Kelly will be well advised if he follows the example of the cloakroom padrones and sews up his appointee's pockets.

A GOOD START, BUT THE GUNS ARE TOO LIGHT.

The army appropriation bill passed by the senate is a step in the right direction. It provides much of the material which will arm a modern army. Its defect is that many of the weapons provided are obviously too light for the uses intended.

The three inch antiaircraft gun is of doubtful utility, a fact that the army seems to recognize in providing only a small increment of these weapons, while asking a much larger number of the modern and more powerful 90 millimeter guns.

The lessons of the German offensive in Belgium and France do not seem to have been thoroly digested in the preparation of the budget requests. As an example, the army intends to buy 1,160 more 37 millimeter antitank guns, altho the British and French found these weapons ineffective in stopping the heavier German tanks.

The .50 caliber machine gun, firing a so-called armor piercing bullet, on which our army still appears to rely for some effect in tank defense, is completely ineffective for this purpose. It is doubtful whether the same weapon, on an antiaircraft mounting, would be much more effective against planes whose crews are protected by armor, as German crews are protected.

The proposal to modernize the obsolete world war 75s is retained. Experience even in the last war showed that these weapons are too light. There was no excuse for keeping them after the necessity of reducing weight to accommodate horse draught had passed. It may be that while the artillery recognizes the defects of these aged guns, it also is more aware than the politicians in Washington are willing to admit of the weakened state of American industry after seven years of New Deal persecution, and is modernizing what guns it has in despair of obtaining a sufficient store of heavier and more effective weapons.

If the 75s could be made sufficiently mobile they could with profit be substituted for the ineffective 37 millimeter guns in antitank service. For genuine artillery purposes they should be replaced as quickly as industry can produce them with the far more efficient 105 and 155 millimeter howitzers and guns. The appropriations provide for far too few of these weapons, of which the army now has only experimental models.

Only light and medium tanks were asked, and of these far too few to build the type of mechanized army that is winning the Nazi victories. If the army is conducting any experiments with heavy tanks comparable to the 80 ton German models that have proved virtually unstoppable, it apparently does not feel ready to ask funds to put them into production.

Such weapons as the appropriation bill provides are as yet only paper weapons. The earliest date at which it is even contemplated that they will be transmuted into metal is the end of the next fiscal year, June 30, 1941. It is not sufficient to provide the money, painful as that will be on top of the New Deal extravagances. Production is the vital problem.

We will not get the weapons if production is left in the hands of the inefficient and politics-ridden government arsenals. We can get them from private industry, but only if the administration ceases its efforts to hamstring private industry.

BAD NEWS FROM THE ARMY MANEUVERS.

The country received another shock yesterday morning when it read Maj. Gen. H. J. Brees' scathing criticism of the conduct of the army maneuvers in Louisiana.

He told the 4,000 officers assembled there that had the concentration been on the larger scale to be expected in a general mobilization, the troops might have bogged down completely. He said that many of the so-called attacks without use of supporting weapons would have been farcical if they had not been tragic, and he laid the major portion of the blame on the senior officers engaged. His only kind words, apparently, were for the noncoms and enlisted men.

Maj. Gen. Brees is the commander of the 8th corps area and was chief control officer of the maneuvers. His criticisms, coming as they do from inside the army and from a man who was on the ground to see what happened, cannot and must not be dismissed without remedial action.

Editorial of the Day

[New York Herald Tribune.]

Mr. Sidney Hillman, president of the clothing workers' union, told his executive board something on Thursday which every one has long been waiting for a labor leader to say. If labor does not shortly clean her own house somebody is going to do it for her—and overdo it. Mr. Hillman's expressed fear is that the government will do it. There is certainly no such inclination in Washington now, where it would seem that unionism cannot be too deeply infected with gangsterism or radicalism to suit the New Deal's "liberal" advisorate.

A change of administration might, of course, bring a reaction against both criminal and subversive unionism which would be ruinous to decent unionism. But what Mr. Hillman does not anticipate, as an alternative to reform from the top down, and what every union man should pray for, as an alternative to such government control as trusts, railroads, banks, exchanges, and so forth, have invited thru their failure to regulate themselves, is reform from the bottom up. The union labor at the bottom is clean, honest and decent. Rot-bellied gangsters and panders, grown too old and too slow to outrun or outshoot a cop, do not join unions as apprentices, eager to become craft masters and thence to graduate into shop ownership. They "muscle in" at the top. Muscovite agents, under instructions from walrus-whiskered Joe of the Kremlin, do not start as mason's, or machinist's, or garment cutter's helpers. They horn in at the top.

The top is the only place where there is any room for them. It is the only rotten part of labor's growth; and the only cure for labor's disease, short of one of those extensions of burocratic federal authority which Mr. Hillman very justly fears, is a genuine house cleaning from the bottom up. This should shake the high salaried "boiled shirts" in Washington down to one thing or another—a sense of responsibility for labor's good name, instead of fancy legislation, or the ashcan. If the machinery for such a shakedown does not exist, the erection of it is labor's greatest current need.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

MYSTERIOUS MISS SCHMIDT.

The death of Emma Goldman, who spent a long lifetime finding out that communism is not a synonym for Utopia, and that the American way of life is preferable to Lenin's and Stalin's, reminded us of certain amusing goings-on around the Studebaker theater about 35 years ago. A company of Russian actors had come to Chicago, with a forgotten genius named Paul Orleneff at their head, and a dark, slender girl named Alla Nazimova [Nasimoff then] for the ingénue rôles in a heavy repertory. The Chicago intellectuals and drama fanciers, who were quite gold coasty then, buzzed with excitement.

"The acting is so marvelous that you can almost understand what they are saying!" This was the theme of the chatter in the lobby, night after night.

Innocent, art-minded capitalism opened its luxurious drawing rooms to the visiting Sarmatians. They were too-too divine. And wherever there was a party, a certain "Miss Schmidt" was in attendance. She spoke English as well as Russian; she was the company's interpreter, factotum, public relations department, and business adviser. The Gold Coast became well acquainted with "Miss Schmidt," and voted her clever.

"Miss Schmidt" was Emma Goldman, whose philosophy was anarchism.

This ironic situation reached its highest point when Baron von Schlippenbach, imperial Russian consul in Chicago, entertained the Russian players in his apartment. A great man of the world, a fine aristocrat and an admirable host was Von Schlippenbach; a man of gallantry, too, among the ladies. The guest to whom he showed the most flattering attention that evening was the intelligent "Miss Schmidt," whose secret soul was probably in sympathy with sinister fellows in Moscow and St. Petersburg who hoped to toss bombs at czars and grand dukes.

LILACS IN A HOSPITAL.

Thanks, nurse. Your thoughtful understanding knew
That I would like the lilacs near my bed,
And by the closeness of their fragrant hue
Surcease would come, my heart be comforted.
Somehow when I but merely close my eyes
This quiet room immediately seems
To be a spacious garden paradise
Of pearl and purple woven into dreams.

My heart would so have missed the loveliness
Of perfumed presence lilacs always bring;
Without the cooling touch of their caress
It would have seemed the days were void of spring.
O, when I walk once more the paths of men,
With pain forgot I'll see these blooms again.

How to Be a Perfect Lady in 1850.

I ask you what has the modern female to kick about? Look at what the genteel lady of the early '50s had to put up with, according to "The Lady's Guide to Perfect Gentility," by Emily Thornwell.

"The Lady Abroad" warns that "a lady should not present herself alone in a library or museum, unless she goes there to study or work as an artist."

The paragraph on "raising the dress" admonishes:

"When tripping over a pavement, a lady should gracefully raise her dress a little above her ankle. With the right hand she should hold together the folds of her gown, and draw them toward the right side. To raise the dress on both sides and with both hands is vulgar."

When at the pianoforte she was reminded not to sing "songs descriptive of masculine passion or sentiment." She was told that "ladies never dine with their gloves on," and was particularly warned against gnawing bones at the table.

Yea, verily, it must have been a trying life.

A Name Without Honor.

In 1487 a student at Merton college, Oxford, named Hugh Shakespeare, changed his name because it bore a bad reputation [vile reputatum est.]. He chose to be called Sawndare.

CROSSES IN FRANCE.

We, your sons, by the Marne and the Meuse
Lying so still in the moon's dim light,
Ask you why, in those dreadful years,
You sent us forth into war's black night?
You have reaped your harvest—remorse and tears,
And we, who challenged the roaring guns,
Here are lying—death stopped—
Your sons.

We, your sons, knew not why we went.
We were so young, but you bade us go
Over the seas where the rockets flared.
There we found them, the mighty foe.
Our eyes we closed, our breasts we bared
To the lads you called the fiendish Huns.
Then came the night, and sleep—
For your sons.

Long the years since the dark came down.
Peace was the goal, but above our graves
War still rages; the spirit of hate
Rules the land which the bright Marne laves.
Terror rules in the halls of state.
It was for peace—our strife—our fate! - - -
Why do we hear the thunder of guns—
We who are lying here—

RECURRING COLDS IN CHILDREN.

THE youngster who is afflicted with recurring colds leads a rather unhappy life. For months on end he may experience scarcely a day of real comfort. While there may be little or no fever, nevertheless the eyes are bleary, a nasal discharge is present, and now and then periodical fits of coughing come on.

A perturbed mother writes: "I just don't know what to do about Johnny's colds. We are careful about drafts and his clothing is adequate. But his appetite isn't quite what it should be altho I am sure that he eats enough. Despite all our precautions no sooner does he recover from one attack than he plunges into another. Rarely will more than a day elapse between bouts."

When the physician examines the lad he is likely to find that he is somewhat anemic with rather more white cells [leucocytes] in the circulation than normal. The nasal mucous membrane will be congested and the bronchial tubes irritated. Rarely will these patients measure up to standard weight because so much of their energy is devoted to combating infection.

As a rule the tot is worse in the morning than at any other hour of day. Both nostrils may be stopped up. In consequence mouth breathing and snoring dry out the oral cavity, rendering it more susceptible to bacterial growths. With a bad tasting tongue, appetite for the morning meal is dulled. During the process of dressing the youngster may be called upon to blow the nose frequently and the discharge is described as watery and thin. Little wonder, then, that all such boys and girls are tired, lackadaisical, irritable, with poor school records.

With such a picture every physician should think of allergy—sensitivity to some particular food or other substance. Now and then it may be necessary to investigate house dust, dandruff from animals [the pet pup, for example], or pollens from plants. In many instances the disturber can be traced to a starter that exists somewhere in the environment. It has been observed repeatedly that a history of allergy may be found in one or both parents. Altho the father or mother may be perfectly well—having overcome his or her susceptibility, nevertheless the offspring is going thru the same sort of distress which they were obliged to endure at an earlier age.

At any rate, the child who complains of a constant stuffy nose should have the benefit of a careful study in the hope that some irritant will be uncovered which—when removed—will be followed by complete relief. Sometimes a hint may be given as to the origin of the trouble by the exhibition of symptoms which simulate asthma, hay fever, or eczema. Occasionally a bright shiny red spot will appear on one or both cheeks. After a day or so this will scale and if the food responsible is not omitted the area will spread.

With some evidence that sensitivity is responsible, a check may be made of the diet. Common offenders—such as wheat, eggs, milk, etc.—may be eliminated one at a time for a period of a week. If improvement is observed the plan may be continued; if not, another article may be excluded—and so on.

This condition has no relation to the so-called seasonal colds and most of these victims will be free but two or three months during the year—namely, from about the middle of June to the middle of August. Numerous examples have been reported in which respite ensued subsequent to a summer vacation spent hundreds of miles away, wherein the meals were modified and the little sufferer was not exposed to household dust which—in his case—may have proved so aggravating.

Yes, it will pay to analyze every chronic cold "repeater" who just cannot seem to conquer a persistent, weakening malady.

NOT HARMFUL.

E. F. writes: I have heard that bread and meat—eaten together—make a harmful combination. Is this true?

REPLY.

Not at all. The notion is probably a child of misinformation. It has no scientific basis. To follow this rule we would be obliged to forgo such interesting and nourishing dishes as chicken pie. So far as the stomach is concerned, it mixes all our edibles rather thoroly regardless of the order or sequence in which they are eaten.

CARTILAGE AND BONE.

R. E. writes: How does cartilage differ from bone?

REPLY.

Cartilage, a firm, fibrous substance, is commonly called gristle. Among other compounds, it contains gelatin. It supplies much of the lubricating fluid for joints and may be the forerunner of bone when bone cells are deposited therein. It varies in density, depending upon its location and function.

Bone consists of about 33 per cent of organic or animal matter, and 67 per cent mineral material, largely calcium, phosphorus, and carbonate.

PUFFY ANKLES.

Mrs. S. writes: In warm weather I suffer from swollen ankles. A urinalysis shows nothing wrong. Should anything be done?

REPLY.

INCENSE.

A. M. writes: Are the fumes of incense poisonous?

REPLY.

TODAY IN HISTORY

May 29, 1813

A British attack on Sackett's Harbor, on the New York shore of Lake Ontario, repulsed by American troops under Gen. Jacob Brown, who later became commanding general of the United States army. Sackett's Harbor was a point of strategic importance for the United States, with a naval station on one side of the harbor and Fort Volunteer on the other side. It was the second British attempt to take the port, a naval squadron having been driven away the previous July.

HOW TO BUILD AN ARMY.

Cleveland, O., May 27.—Before manufacturing 50,000 planes or 80,000 ton battleships or a new Panama canal, it would be well to consider if we are preparing for war or just kidding ourselves.

Military science is susceptible to the same development as is any other science. It is because the Germans have developed new mechanisms that they are successful—not because their men are braver, better trained, or harder workers. In fact, German military science has relegated the rifle carrying soldier into the discard. An army now consists of pilots of mechanized units. Hence, the present defense program of building obsolete military equipment is silly, as Lindbergh has told us and as events in Europe prove.

New ideas do not permeate static minds. The tank, which is the spearhead of the German drive into France, was condemned by every military officer when it was suggested. The wooden warship was proved antiquated in 1863 in the battle of the Merrimac and the Monitor, but our navy still built wooden ships for a generation after. Every advance in military equipment has been introduced from the outside against the determined opposition of the trained militarist. Hence, it would be well to consider the following facts before we jump off the deep end:

If we should take an army to Europe it would be chewed to pieces by the present mechanized units of the German army as the French, British, Belgian and Dutch troops have been. They do not lack bravery. They are trying to fight a machine gun with bow and arrow.

If we feel we must pick a fight with Hitler then let us at least give our soldiers a chance. The needed mechanized fighting units cannot be developed by tyros. Promise and performance must coincide, nor can it be done by stubborn militarists living in the past. The only chance for success is to turn the job over to some of a thousand industrial geniuses in this country who have the ability to think originally.

American industrial genius could, inside of five years, develop new methods of warfare which could successfully challenge Germany or any other power or powers. The job can be done only by the same kind of ability that developed the automobile, the airplane, the radio, and all other advances in the mechanical arts. That is the only hope for a successful challenge to Germany. If we give these geniuses this job it might be well to allow them to spend their time on the development of these new arms instead of badgering, blackguarding and blaming them as has been done by government for the last seven years. This last is not an essential, but it would be helpful. Meanwhile it would be well to silence Washington and deal with reality.

INTERESTS PULLMAN PORTERS.

Chicago, May 25.—In our official meeting today we discussed your editorial concerning the yearly earnings of the Pullman company.

It is regrettable that every employé of the Pullman company could not read your comments.

The employés have received the largest end of the revenue of the Pullman company, yet there has been a long period of decreased employment. Among the ranks of the porters there has been a lack of earnings. There were fewer porters employed last year than in any previous year of high earnings in Pullman's history. The facts might awaken the employés from the false period of labor's rule as instilled in the working man's mind by the leaders of their unions.

LILACS IN THE HOSPITALS.

Chicago, May 25.—On behalf of the patients of Cook county hospital, I wish to thank you and the good members of your organization for the lovely lilacs sent to the hospital on Lilac day.

The members of The Tribune staff who made this day possible do not know the inestimable amount of pleasure the sight and fragrance of these blossoms gave to our unfortunate sick patients, many of whom live where they rarely see flowers.

Manus McCloskey,
Warden.

Chicago, May 25.—In behalf of all our patients I wish to thank The Tribune for the lilacs which you so generously sent yesterday. They were a source of joy to all who saw and received them.

Herman Smith, M. D.
Director, Michael Reese Hospital.

Chicago, May 25.—In behalf of our patients we extend to you hearty thanks for the beautful lilacs that you sent to our hospital. Your thoughtfulness brought happiness to the sick.

Sr. Mary Justine,
Superior, Holy Cross hospital.

PLANES OVER THE PARK.

Chicago, May 25.—The other evening as I languished on a lake shore bench enjoying a near-Venetian vista of the lagoon, a flight of planes appeared from the south. Perhaps, I mused, there is a convention for transport pilots in town. Or, has the Nazi juggernaut, in its efforts to reach the channel ports, overshot the mark and mistaken our midcontinental seat for London? It occurred to me instinctively the passageway beneath the Outer drive would make an ideal bombproof shelter. Then the craft were overhead. I breathed more easily. They were United States army ships.

Around about a thousand necks were arched to see a sample of our national air might. Roosevelt for President was not smoked out in the sky, nor did a bevy of chorines "bail out," waving the Stars and Stripes. Yet as we looked on a fact was suggested. For our American security we need more planes and more men to fly them.

Thomas Lincoln Talbot.

HITLER'S MEDALS.

Chicago, May 27.—Would it not be charitable on the part of the American mother who received Hitler's generous award for having a large family to send the medal back to the donor with instructions to give it to the mother of some lads who are being ruthlessly destroyed on his victory marches? These mothers would surely appreciate that kind and loving remembrance. Perhaps Mr. Hitler also has an award for feeble, helpless old people who are driven from their homes, and still, perhaps, another for little children who are starving, ill clothed, and wounded. Surely, his boundless generosity does not stop at giving awards to mothers of large families.

V. A. McB.

BUT WE HAVEN'T OPPOSED IT.

Chicago, May 26.—Why does The Tribune on the one hand oppose national rearmament, insisting that our navy and army are large enough now, and on the other hand organize a "sportsmen's" military clique to act as a "private army"? What is this—somebody's Schutzstafel or just merely a "fifth column"? If the price of liberty is vigilance, I hope the department of justice is vigilant.

Frank L. Hunter.

THE BROADCASTERS' CLAQUE.

Chicago, May 27.—A fortune awaits any one who invents a radio that will automatically silence the earsplitting applause of the imbeciles who frequent radio studios and who applaud anything and everything that is broadcast.

This silly procedure not only wastes a lot of valuable radio time but irritates the listening public, making the radio a nuisance instead of the means for enjoyment.

M. J. K.

PERHAPS A FRIENDLY CALL.

Chicago, May 27.—A. J. B. asks what has happened to the mysterious submarines sighted off our coast by F. D. R. Probably they were not German but Russian submarines paying a friendly visit to John L. Lewis, Harold Ickes, Ma Perkins, and Harry Bridges, and that they have been escorted safely home by several of our destroyers. It was planned that way.

RIGHT TO PROPERTY.

Chicago, May 24 [Legal Friend of the People].—A piece of property was purchased by husband and wife in 1924. The wording of the certificate of title reads as follows: ———Husband's name [as to an undivided one-half interest]——— in tenancy in common——— ——— Wife's name [as to an undivided one-half interest]———

1. After the husband's death in 1932, would the wife have a legal right to dispose of the property?
2. Has a son, who was a minor when the husband died but has now reached majority, any claim on the property?
3. If so, could mother and son sell jointly?
4. The property has never gone thru probate. Is this essential?
5. The wife's name was legally changed after husband's death. Would this cause any complications?

A. K.

1. No, in the sense that the one-half descends to the heirs of the one who had died.
2 and 3. Yes.
4. Probate would be necessary in order to produce a readily salable title, but you might find a purchaser who would be willing to waive the requirement.
5. No.

"No person shall build, construct, use or maintain any fence or barrier consisting or made of what is called 'barbed wire,' or of which barbed wire is a part, within the city, along the line of, or in, or upon, or along, any public way; or thru, along, or around, any public park; or in and about or along any land or lots or parks owned or controled by the city."

CARROZZO'S RULE BY STRIKE THREAT IS TOLD TO JURY

Charges Are Unfolded in Federal Inquiry.

Charges that Mike Carrozzo, rich boss of the street laborers' union, has used strike threats to bludgeon the concrete industry into submission are being unfolded before a federal grand jury investigating trade restraints in the Chicago building industry.

This was learned yesterday shortly after Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson continued the term of the building grand jury for another month to enable it to proceed with the government's trust busting inquiry in this area. The extension was the first granted under a new federal law which permits grand juries to sit for 18 months, if necessary, to complete major investigations.

The attention of the grand jury is reported centered on charges that Carrozzo for years has refused to allow any ready mixed concrete or mobile mixing machinery to be used in the city. Contractors say they fear labor trouble should they attempt to defy Carrozzo's decree.

Work Held Up on U. S. Project.

Last October Carrozzo held up work on the Ida B. Wells south side housing project for several weeks when the contractor planned to use a mobile mixer. Carrozzo finally permitted work to be resumed on only one condition: That an engineer from his union stand idly by to watch the machine work.

The housing project, costing 7 million dollars, was being financed in part by federal money, a fact which brought the situation to the government's attention.

Engineers say the product and machinery banned by Carrozzo would result in substantial savings in construction costs. Premixed concrete loaded at a company's yards on a truck concrete mixer is mixed during the course of the truck's run to the building or paving project. Carrozzo's opposition to this system is based on the premise that it would take jobs away from dues paying wheelbarrow pushers.

Tierney Gathers Evidence.

Much of the evidence now being laid before the grand jurors was gathered by Leo F. Tierney, special assistant to the United States attorney general, who is in charge of anti-trust prosecutions in Chicago.

The concrete inquiry already is bringing results. A little over a week ago, city officials accepted bids for street work to be done with ready mixed product.

It is reported that the government next will take up charges that Carrozzo influences the asphalt industry. Tierney became interested in this phase of building after Carrozzo called a mysterious strike at city asphalt plants a month ago, shortly after Oscar E. Hewitt, commissioner of public works, rejected bids on 100,000 tons of asphalt and solicited new bids saving the city $10,000.

Inquiry disclosed that the Illinois Asphalt company, which was low in the first bidding and was not asked to bid again, was incorporated by Samuel Kart, Carrozzo's lawyer and head of the Street Cleaners' union.

4 CHICAGOANS INDICTED ON OHIO ROBBERY CHARGE

Toledo, O., May 28 [Special].—Four Chicago men and one from Toledo were indicted by the Lucas county grand jury today on charges of armed robbery in two holdups at a gambling house here last winter.

The defendants are Joseph Weisbrod, Robert Goldberg, Morris Henkin, and Solomon Spilkey, all of Chicago, and Max Craden of Toledo. The Chicagoans were arrested in the Illinois city on May 15 in connection with an old murder investigation and were said to have admitted the Toledo robberies. They have been ordered returned here.

Weisbrod, Goldberg anc Craden were indicted on a charge of obtaining $9,800 in a robery here last Jan. 18. All five were charged with participating in a second robbery at the same place on Feb. 20 when $2,700 was taken.

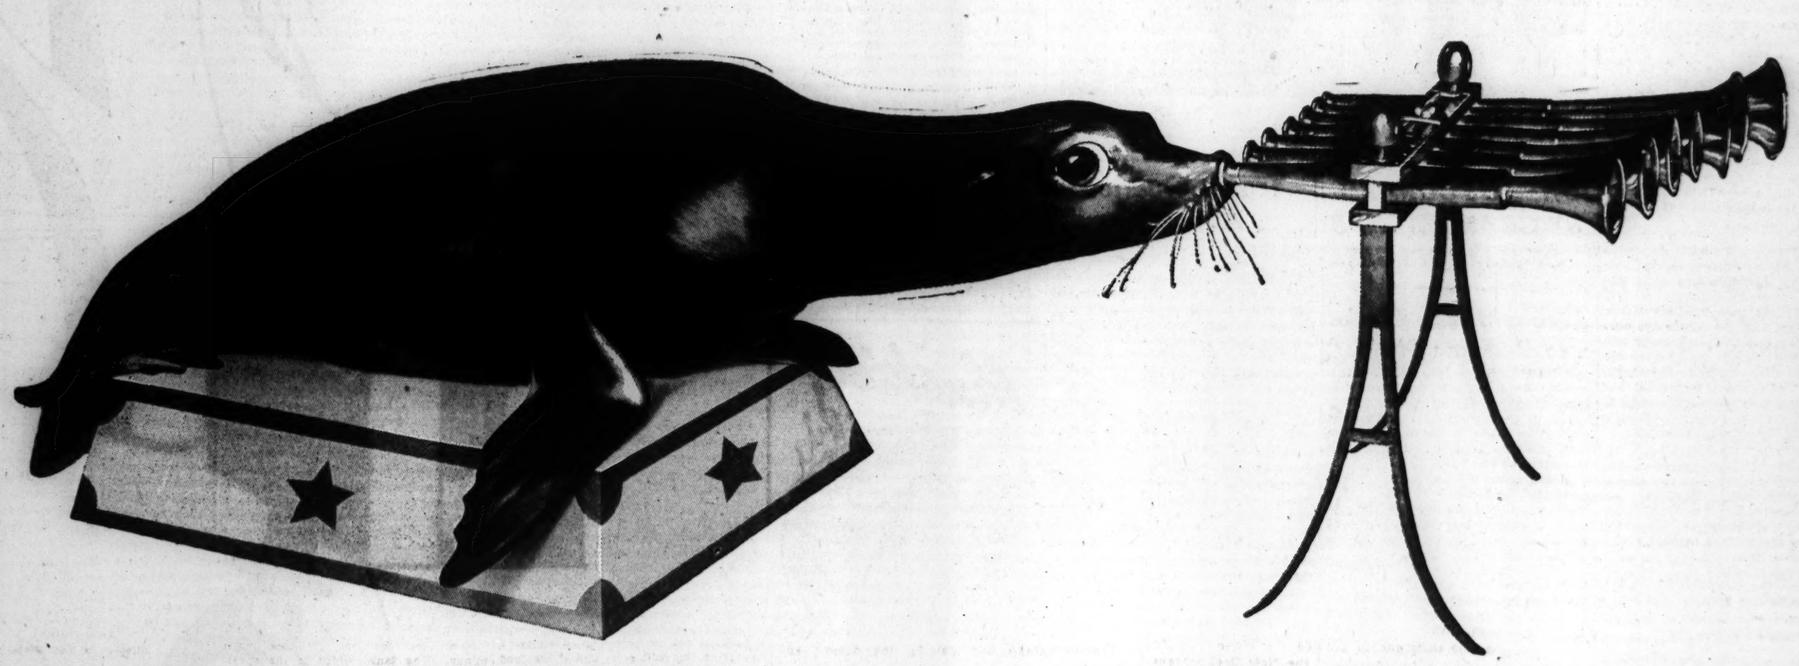
Charlie can play anything just so it's "America"



When Tom Thumb and the bearded lady and the sword-swallower have paraded around the arena, and the Flying Wallendas have scared us out of a month's growth—then comes an act no circus is complete without.

25 DAY CRUISES TO PERU EVERY 2 WEEKS SLATED

Moderate Priced Liners to Touch 4 Countries.

BY FREDERIC BABCOCK.

Peru, with its ultramodernism in an ancient setting, is to be the goal of a series of cruises this summer. Three other countries will be visited en route.

The series is designed to appeal to persons with limited budgets and limited vacation time. Each cruise is to last 25 days. The three weeks' vacationist who can squeeze in an "English" week-end—from Thursday to Tuesday—can be accommodated, and still have time to make the rail journey from Chicago to New York and return.

Sailing Every Two Weeks.

Beginning Friday, June 7, there will be a sailing from New York every two weeks. Two ships are to be used. Both were built especially for cruising in the tropics. All staterooms open on to the sea, and many of them have private baths. Both liners have outdoor swimming pools, beach decks, and veranda cafes.

Itineraries call for a daylight voyage thru the Panama canal and stops at Cristobal and Balboa, Canal Zone; Colon and Panama City, Panama; Buenaventura, Colombia; Guayaquil and Manta, Ecuador, and Callao, Peru.

Three Nights in Lima.

From Callao the passengers will be taken to Lima, where they will be put up at the Gran Hotel Bolivar for two days and three nights.

Lima is more than 400 years old. Its San Marcos university antedates Harvard—oldest university in this country—by three-quarters of a century. Its museum presents a vivid picture of Inca and pre-Inca times.

In contrast to these scenes are polo fields, night clubs, a bull ring, and racing. Short drives lead to seaside resorts and casinos and to the mountain resort of Chosica, where Limans spend their winter week-ends. Another drive leads to the ruins of Pachacamac, sacred city of a pre-Inca race.

Mountain Trip Beautiful.

But—to this traveler, at least—the main attraction on a visit to Lima is the excursion leading from the city to the mountains, three miles high, behind the city of Huancayo. This trip, taken over the world's highest standard guard railway, is by way of a score or more switchbacks, so that by the time the tourist is 15,800 feet in the air he has become completely bedazzled—if not befuddled—by his transference to another world.

For the name of the steamship company operating these cruises, or any further information concerning them, write the Chicago Tribune Travel bureau at 1 South Dearborn street or phone Superior 0200, local 734.

PONDER EFFECTS OF STREAMLINED FLORIDA TRAINS

What effect streamliner service between Chicago and Miami will have on next year's passenger traffic figures was being discussed by travel experts here yesterday, following announcement by the interstate commerce commission that passenger revenues on railroad coaches between New York and Miami showed a 34 per cent gain last winter over the previous season.

At the same time the Pullman business showed a rise of 8 per cent. Both increases were attributed largely to the new streamliner service along the Atlantic coast.

It was announced in THE TRIBUNE'S financial pages the other day that next winter will see streamlined trains operating over three railroads between this city and Florida.

A South American Landmark

JUNEAU FOUNDED BY GRANDFATHER OF ILLINOIS GIRL

Aurora Miss in Alaska to Dedicate Shaft.

JUNEAU, Alaska, May 28 [Special].—Mary Jean Juneau of Aurora, Ill., granddaughter of one of the founders of this city, will take part in the dedication of a monument to the founders—Joe Juneau and Dick Harris—here on Memorial day.

Accompanied by her friends, Florence Kilb and Anne Merchut, Miss Juneau sailed from Seattle for the Alaskan capital last Tuesday aboard the Denali. All three work in the railroad offices in Aurora.

The city that greeted the trio when they arrived here yesterday is a far cry from the scene that greeted Juneau and Harris when they discovered Quartz gulch in 1880.

Floors Paved with Gold.

The floors of the gulch were actually paved with glinting flecks and stringers of virgin gold. The discovery started the Juneau gold rush nearly 20 years before the stampede into the Klondike regions.

On Oct. 4 of that year the two pioneers sat on the rocky shore and drew up on paper what they called, at first, the Harris mining district. At their backs was a wilderness; at their feet lay packs of rich ore—all they could stagger under.

Wintering in Sitka and Wrangell, the prospectors awaited the news that was to bring them wealth, along with boats to take them back to the new strike.

Now Dignified Capital.

This was the founding of a city that was to go thru the stages of a roughneck gold rush town and become the dignified capital of a territory one-fifth the size of the United States proper. By 1900 the population had grown to 1,864; today it is 5,748.

The city that Mary Jean Juneau's grandfather helped to start is still the center of an opulent gold mining area. It also is headquarters for a fleet of fishing boats and boasts many modern public buildings and private homes.

What rent do you want to pay for your next apartment?

For apartments in every rental bracket, in all popular neighborhoods and suburbs, consult the Apartments to Rent columns in the Tribune want ad section.

Listing more apartments than all other Chicago newspapers combined, the Tribune want ad columns offer all-price-range selection—from the lowest to the highest.

Before you start your search, make up a list from the offers in the Tribune. With your selections to guide you, you will climb no stairs to see places which could not possibly interest you. You will waste no time aimlessly wandering thru neighborhoods relying on luck to find an attractive apartment.

Because they get better results, apartment owners and rental agents place more Apartments to Rent want advertising in the Tribune than in all other Chicago newspapers combined. To reach Chicago's largest constant audience, call Superior 0100, and ask for a Want Ad-Viser.

To simplify your search, the Tribune classifies Apartments to Rent want ads by locations in the city and suburbs and by numbers of rooms. This permits you to turn immediately to the group which offers apartments of the size and in the locality you prefer.

INDIANA CAVERNS YIELD RECORDS OF ANCIENT ERAS

Evansville Explorer Tells of Investigations.

Evansville, Ind., May 28 [Special].—The prehistoric salt ocean that formed Indiana limestone and simultaneously created a hundred Hoosier caverns also has preserved the stone age man intact, in the belief of George F. Jackson, Evansville photographer and explorer.

"Folsom man, who lived 20,000 years ago, probably is sealed up in some cavern tomb, his remains preserved in stone by ancient limestone vapors," Jackson said today as he prepared to make his eighth photographic journey thru Wyandotte cave. It will be his 211th descent to explore subterranean phenomena.

Cave Explorer for 15 Years.

"I always wondered what lies beyond the walls which archeologists said were formed by dripstone curtains in the last thousand years," he said.

Jackson, who is 33 years old, has devoted 15 years to photographing geological formations. He has traversed and photographed most of the unmapped sinks of southern Indiana's cavern belt—in Harrison, Crawford, Greene, Lawrence, Monroe, Orange, Owen, and Washington counties.

Jackson believes that man's early symbols in eye language, carved on walls in pictures of his totems, are likely to be discovered in one or more Indiana caves. All the caverns he has visited have been inhabited at some age by man, and many bear evidence of occupancy by primitive races. Paints, beads, dart points, ritual stones, flint knives, and other artifacts have been found in most of them—but never a burial crypt or the pictured writing of early man's beliefs and habits.

"But they are there," Jackson said, "in sealed rooms."

In support of his statement he displays a name and date carved 139 years ago on the walls of Wyandotte cave.

Arduous Treks Told.

"Older carvings and signatures are likely to be better preserved," he said, "because of the processes of lime vapors that eat at indentations, or encrust other markings to give them as bas relief effect."

Jackson has made more trips thru Wyandotte's 23 miles of passageways than has any other explorer.

"At that," he said, "I have made only seven complete trips thru what are known as the unexplored parts—each a long, hard journey of 15 to 24 hours that requires descending on a rope to a double pit 75 feet down."

Many miles of subterranean chambers in other Indiana caves never have been explored, and in some of the known caverns there are sections only partially penetrated.

Caves with an electric system that provide camera days for visitors are called "civilized" in Jackson's terminology. He prefers the "uncivilized" ones, in which the camera explorer is strictly on his own.

Central City, Colo., to Have 3 Weeks of Grand Opera

Central City, Colo., May 28 [Special].—High in the Rockies, this little town, once known as a gold mining center, will present three weeks of grand opera again this summer. This season's attraction is Friedrich Smetana's "The Bartered Bride," July 6 to 27. Central City is reached by motor coach from Denver, which is 35 miles away.

Graves of Union Soldiers to Be Decorated in South

Raleigh, N. C., May 28 [Special].—Four national cemeteries established primarily for Union soldiers killed in this southern state during the civil war will be among those visited on Memorial day. They are in Raleigh, New Bern, Salisbury, and Wilmington.

Skyscraper

MICHIGAN PARK GUIDES TO TEND YOUR CHILDREN!

The Michigan department of conservation has worked out a system calling for such service in a number of the state parks. Seventy-five nature guides, life guards, recreation leaders, and playground directors will look after the youngsters while the parents set out with rod and reel.

Forty nature guides are undergoing a 10 day training period and will be ready to go into action when the park season opens Memorial day. They are studying in the department's school at Pigeon River state forest, near Wolverine.

SEINING IN IOWA LAKES TO SAVE ITS FINGERLINGS

Spencer, Ia., May 28 [Special].—Because the big fish are devouring the fingerlings—millions of which have been planted by the government hatcheries—many of the lakes in this region are to be seined this year.

Round lake, one of a group in the eastern part of Clay county, will be opened to fishermen this season for the first time in years. Spirit lake is among those where seining will be permitted.

LIFE INTERESTING ON THE WORLD'S BIGGEST RANCH

Covers 16,000 Square Miles in Australia.

BY QUENTIN POPE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VICTORIA RIVER DOWNS, Australia [By Mail].—This cattle ranch on the Wickham river is claimed by Australians to be the largest in the world. The 16,000 square miles over which Alfred Martin rules are equal to twice the size of Massachusetts, or one-third the area of New York state.

Remote from cities and villages, Victoria River Downs has a village of its own. It holds a well stocked general store, a saddler's shop, a blacksmith's shop, automobile service sheds, and the homes of the ranch hands. All around are well tended gardens, and the impression is of some modern community.

The Australian Inland mission, which founded and operated the flying doctor service, used to have a hospital here. It was set up years ago when the federal government was eager to do something for the inhabitants. For a long time the death rate was 5 or 6 a year, tho the white population was only about 60. Today, seven years after the home was established, fatal cases of malaria have ceased to occur. Nevertheless, in 1939 the government decided the flying doctor service and the Australian aerial medical service were sufficient protection for the settlers, and the hospital was closed.

Life is Interesting.

To visit this spot is to realize how interesting life can be in the Australian far north. On every hand you are reminded of the difference from the south. The heat is fierce. At dinner in the farm house you are waited on by young black girls, trained to do the work of servants. And in the nearby river, if you fancy sport, you may find crocodiles basking on the sunbaked logs.

Two chief varieties of crocodile are found in the river. The smaller ones grow to 5 or 6 feet in length, can move both jaws freely, and, tho fierce looking, will not attack humans. The larger ones have been known to grow 28 feet long and can move their top jaw only. Local dwellers call the small ones "crocks," and the larger ones "gators." There are no wild alligators in this country.

These crocodiles levy a toll of some hundreds of steers yearly around these parts. If they fail to fix their teeth in a victim they attack him with blows from their tails.

Bower Birds More Pleasant.

More pleasant watching are the bower birds. Within two miles of the Victoria Downs homestead the ground is strewn with bones, shells, pieces of tin, other shining objects, and highly colored berries with which these gray birds have played. They nest in thorny shrubs.

The jackass found here is smaller than the one in the south, and more gaily colored, but never breaks into those bursts of mirth which startle visitors elsewhere. The native blacks have an explanation for it. "Say, boss," one said, "the bally thing has nothing to laugh at up here."

Thirty-five miles from the downs is an arresting rock formation. It is a natural Sphinx, measuring 30 feet from the neck to the top of its head, and is best seen with the afternoon sun showing eye, nose, and chin. The unsmiling mouth is not always visible, but proportions of neck and chest are notable. This Australian Sphinx is on the road to Pigeon Hole.

PENNSYLVANIA TOWN TO HONOR SUBSTITUTE FOR LINCOLN IN ARMY

Stroudsburg, Pa., May 28 [Special]. Memorial day services here Thursday will honor the man who substituted for Abraham Lincoln in the Union army.

In the early part of the civil war President Lincoln often said that, since he could not be fighting in the ranks as he felt he should be, he would like to send a substitute. The Rev. John Staples, army chaplain and pastor of the Stroudsburg Methodist church, heard of the President's wishes and offered the services of his son, J. Summerfield Staples. The young man was accepted and served in that capacity.

Returning to Stroudsburg after the war, Staples spent the rest of his life here. The headstone over his grave bears this inscription:

"J. Summerfield Staples, a private of Co. C, 126 Reg. P. V. Also a member of the 2 Reg. D. C. Vols, as a substitute for Abraham Lincoln. Died Jan. 11, 1888."

NEXT HURDLE IN TRANSIT UNITY: MOTOR COACHES

Provision Made in Franchise for Buying Buses.

BY LAURENCE BURD.

Purchase of the Chicago Motor Coach [bus] company by the city's transit lines will be the chief transit unification hurdle to be cleared if the proposed traction ordinance is approved at a referendum scheduled for sometime in August, Ald. James R. Quinn [50th] said yesterday. Ald. Quinn is chairman of the city council's special traction subcommittee, which last week reached an agreement with the transit lines on terms for the unified franchise.

The unification ordinance is now being drafted by Philip Harrington, city traction commissioner, and William H. Sexton, traction counsel. It will be submitted in synopsis form to the traction subcommittee on Tuesday. If approved by the subcommittee, the ordinance will be sent to the local transportation committee, which will hold public hearings on it. Then it will go to the city council.

Must Include Bus Company.

The ordinance, Ald. Quinn said, will clearly specify that the new transit system must include the bus company as well as the surface and elevated lines, thus giving Chicago a completely unified transportation system. The bus company's properties will be bought by the proposed Chicago Transit company after it has been formed by a merger of the surface and elevated lines, he explained.

The securities holders, or owners, of the surface and elevated lines will vote on their reorganization plan already mapped out, including provision for merger under the proposed traction ordinance, before the referendum is held. This means that a referendum approval will be the final step prior to carrying out the lines' actual unification. The lines are undergoing reorganization in the federal court.

Free to Bargain.

The bus company, however, is in a different position from the transit lines. It is not under court jurisdiction, and is free to bargain for the best price obtainable in selling its properties and business to the new transit company.

Benjamin Weintraub, president of the bus company, has sat in with city and transit representatives during the franchise negotiations for the last year. He has told them that the company is for sale, but no price has been discussed. The company is controled by the Omnibus corporation of New York City.

"The traction ordinance cannot become effective until the motor coach company is purchased," Ald. Quinn said yesterday. "The ordinance may fix a maximum price above which the transit company could not pay. It will contain a provision for arbitrating the purchase price if the groups cannot agree."

Value Estimates Vary.

Last summer, when valuation of transit properties was being discussed by the city and the transit lines, a valuation of the bus company was submitted by George E. Goldthwaite, consulting engineer for the city. He valued the properties on a "book value" basis at 5 million dollars, but said that the company's good earning power might justify a valuation figure of more than 8 million dollars.

In the last two years the company's receipts from fares have averaged about $5,300,000, and its net income, after paying all expenses, taxes, and interest, but before dividends, has averaged about $800,000.

Acquisition of the bus lines will take a sizable chunk of the 20 million dollars in cash now held by the transit lines and committed for use in the proposed 102 million dollar eight year transit improvement program. Sixty millions are to be spent in the first three years, of which 45 millions, it is planned, will be borrowed from the Reconstruction Finance corporation. The new company, it has been suggested, might conserve some of its cash by paying for the bus company partly in cash and partly in first mortgage bonds, that would have a prior claim on the new transit system's earnings.

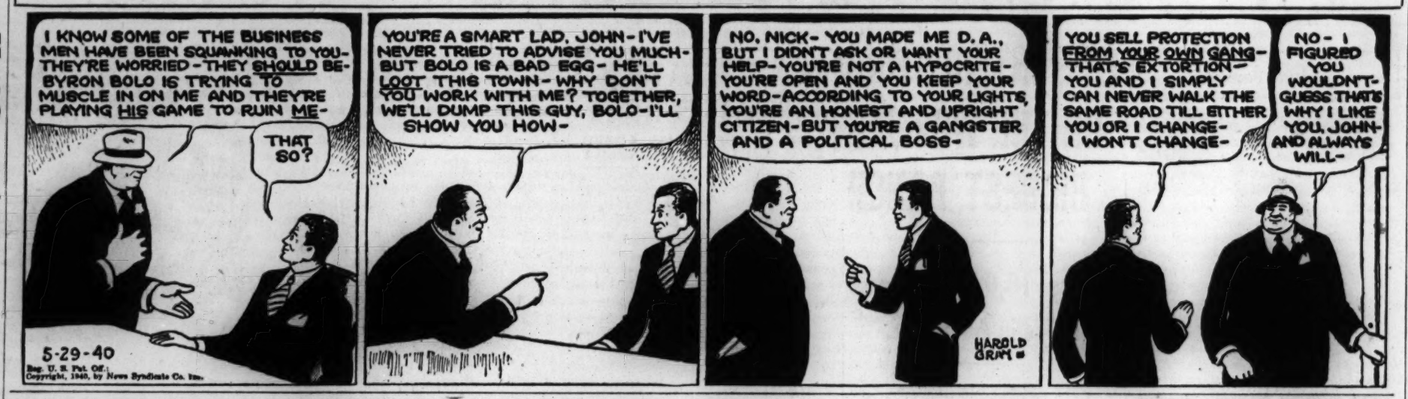
LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Honest John



STAR REHEARSES TODAY FOR W-G-N 'IRENE' PREMIERE

Anna Neagle to Put in Extra Sessions.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Stars of the screen and stage, as pleasing to the ear as to the eye, will parade to radio station W-G-N this weekend for two productions already listed as "musts" in listeners' logbooks. Anna Neagle, British actress, starts the procession today when she arrives to rehearse for the radio première of "Irene," to be presented from 7 to 8 p. m. Friday.

Igor Gorin, who will sing in "Blossom Time."

Burgess Meredith, who is to play the male lead, will be here tomorrow. And Pat O'Brien, star of scores of films, will come from Hollywood to be the headliner in "The Pageant of America," highlight of the Chicago Tribune Symphonic hour from 9 to 10 p. m. Sunday.

Both productions will be broadcast over the coast to coast network of the Mutual Broadcasting system. "Irene" will be the attraction for the regular Fifth Row Center program.

To Wear "Alice Blue Gown."

Miss Neagle will be accompanied by her producer and director, Herbert Wilcox. She is to appear at the movie première of "Irene" at the Oriental theater Friday. She will wear her "Alice Blue Gown" of the film to the W-G-N studio and introduce the song of the same name, with Betty Barrett taking it up for the swing version. The W-G-N production staff headed by Director Blair Walliser, along with the cast, viewed the movie to study effects.

Rehearsals already are in full swing. Miss Neagle will get in some extra rehearsals thru her early arrival. The W-G-N orchestra, directed by Harold Stokes, will be expanded into a symphonic dance orchestra of 40 pieces for the show. Besides the soloists, there will be a chorus of 14 voices under the direction of Robert Trendler.

Pat O'Brien, recently starred in the Warner Brothers' "The Fighting 69th," will leave Hollywood Friday night and arrive here at 2:45 p. m. Sunday on the Super Chief. He will go at once to W-G-N for intensive rehearsal of "The Pageant of America," in which he will be the narrator as achievements and triumphs of the nation's history are re-created.

Special Audience to Hear It.

The Symphonic hour will be presented before a specially invited studio audience made up of veterans of the 1st division of the A. E. F. who fought at Cantigny, France, in the world war; members of the Sons of the American Revolution, and members of the Western Society of Engineers. Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE and a 1st division veteran, will speak briefly during the broadcast.

The musical portion of the hour will be presented by Marion Claire, soprano, and the W-G-N Symphonic orchestra and chorus under the direction of Henry Weber. In the musical score will be "God Bless America," with Miss Claire as soloist.

Igor Gorin, internationally known baritone, arrived from New York yesterday to begin rehearsals for "Blossom Time," operetta to be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N and Mutual from 9 to 10 p. m. tomorrow. Gorin will sing the rôle of Franz Schubert. Officials and members of the Tribune Chicagoland Music Festival committee will attend the broadcast, which is being produced and directed by William A. Bacher.

WHEN YOUR LIVER ACTS UP • • • YOUR SPIRITS GO DOWN

A liver that fails to secrete all the bile it should may be the cause of much of the misery of temporary constipation. It is important therefore that the laxative you take also helps stimulate sufficient bile flow to act on intestinal waste. This is why Beechams Pills are increasingly favored as a laxative. By helping stimulate bile flow, this purely vegetable compound helps drive away the headachy, tired feeling that comes from faulty elimination. Buy Beechams Pills at your druggist's—10¢, 25¢, 50¢.

GIRL, 14, MASTERS DICTIONARY; WINS SPELLING CROWN

Defeats 21 Others in National Finals.

Laurel Kuykendall. [Assoc. Press Wirephoto.]

Mastering such jawbreakers as "plantain," "campanile," "euthanasia," and "adventitious," Laurel Kuykendall of Cookeville, Tenn., survived 69 rounds of a contest sponsored by 22 daily newspapers. Her award was $500 and two plaques.

New Jersey Girl Second.

Second place went to Elizabeth O'Keefe, red headed 13 year old of Hoboken, N. J. She won $200. Eleanor Shea of Omaha won third place and $100.

The finalists were chosen from 2,000,000 grammar school children who participated in preliminary bees.

The winner said that for the last year she and her father would sit down at night after the work was done on the Kuykendalls' 132 acre farm and "spell a bit from the dictionary." They used the dictionary Laurel had won as Putnam county champion.

Father Sees Triumph.

"The last time she spelled completely thru without an error," said Simon Kuykendall, her father, a former teacher. Kuykendall was a proud witness of his daughter's triumph.

Laurel said she intended to save the money for college. "I want to be a schoolteacher like daddy was," she added. She has to walk a mile from the farm to school, where she is in the eighth grade.

Lee O'Connell of Detroit was the last survivor of seven boy contestants. He stayed until the 39th round, when he left the field to four girls.

17 Pct. of Berwyn Village 1938 Levy Ruled Illegal

County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki yesterday ruled illegal $69,000, or 17 per cent, of the 1938 tax levies of the village of Berwyn. He overruled objections, however, to another $20,451, or 5 per cent, of the levies. Most of the items ruled out were held illegal because of failure to itemize properly the purposes for which the appropriations were made. Judge Jarecki also overruled objections to $1,500 levied in 1938 by the village of Arlington Heights for its library.

18 SPEEDERS ADD $105 TO RED CROSS WAR RELIEF FUND

Judge Gibson E. Gorman of the traffic court obtained $105 for the Red Cross war relief fund yesterday. Faced with the choice of paying a fine or contributing the amount of the fine to the Red Cross, motorists arrested for speeding made up the amount for the fund.

The Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross yesterday passed the quarter million dollar mark in its war relief campaign, according to James B. Forgan, chairman.

A $5,000 corporate contribution by Marshall Field & Co. was the largest gift of the day, bringing the total to $253,374. Other substantial donations received yesterday included $2,486 from the Harris Trust and Savings bank and $1,000 from Mrs. Sewell Avery.

WHY FALSE TEETH WEARERS HAVE BAD BREATH

Millions Suffer Without Knowing!

You can't notice any odor from your plate or bridge—but others may! Dentists call this odor "denture breath" and it's serious. It comes from a mucin-scum that collects on plates and bridges. This scum is almost invisible—but it can make your breath so bad that friends shudder. It can breed decay-bacteria that infect your other teeth, actually hurt your health and spoil your pleasure.

Ordinary brushing often can't get this scum off plate or bridge—can't protect you against "denture breath." But just try Polident! Polident not only cleans—it actually purifies plates and bridges without brushing. It gets every bit of scum, tarnish, stain and odor—dissolves it away and leaves your plate sweet and clean as new.

Your breath will be fresher, your mouth feel cleaner—and your plate last longer and look better. Polident is approved by dental authorities, Good Housekeeping and tens of thousands of delighted users. Long-lasting can costs only 30¢ at any drug store.

POLIDENT
CLEANS, PURIFIES LIKE MAGIC
Do this daily: Add a little Polident powder to ½ glass water. Stir. Then put in plate or bridge for 10 to 15 minutes — Rinse —and it's ready to use!

ARMY BOMBER'S CRASH PUZZLES OFFICIALS; 6 DIE

Falls While on Routine Practice Flight.

March Field, Cal., May 28 [Special].—Mystery tonight surrounded the crash of an army bombing plane in the desert near Mojave, Cal., last night, killing two officers and a crew of four.

While members of an inquiry board searched for an explanation, the only person able to give first hand information about the tragedy—Sergt. John B. Stewart of Midway, Ala., the sole survivor—lay in a hospital too seriously injured to be questioned.

List of Victims.

Those killed were: Second Lieutenant Charles A. Nisbett, 25, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard N. Nisbett, live in Alton, Ill.; Second Lieutenant Jess A. Smith, 30, Fort Collins, Colo.; Sergt. Thurman T. Owens, Ardmore, Okla.; Privates Wayne G. Kaufman, Tyrone, N. M.; Doyle H. Bean, Kirbyville, Tex., and Eugene A. Schulz, Twin Falls, Idaho.

The plane, a Douglas bomber, designed for general bombardment missions, took off at 7 p. m, last night from March field, where it was attached to the 34th bombardment squadron. It was sent on a lone night bombing mission to Muroc dry lake, the army's bombing range in the Mojave desert.

For three hours it winged over the San Bernardino mountains. During that time it dispatched routine radio messages and deposited its load of dummy bombs according to scheduled night practice procedure.

May Have Attempted Landing.

Field officials said they had no information as to what happened. They believed the bomber must have tumbled into a spin while attempting to land at the practice range, but they had no ideas concerning the reason for it plunging out of control.

News of the crash was not disclosed by the army until daybreak, but ambulances sped to the scene soon after the plane came down and took Sergt. Stewart to a hospital in San Francisco.

Patrols on Muroc dry lake, hearing the crash, were the first to reach the scene. They said the ship was burning when they reached it. Two men were trapped inside but Stewart and the remaining four were tossed clear of the wreckage.

Those seriously injured are John Daley, 61, of 3220 Lexington street, and Thomas Courtney, 66, of 101 South Francisco avenue. All the injured were taken to the Robert Burns hospital for treatment.

War Refugees –Fox Hounds– on Way Here

BY JUDITH CASS.

FOUR aristocratic refugees from England already are in Northbrook and 16 are on the way, expected to land in New York any day. They aren't children, nor are they old people. In fact, they are not persons at all, but hounds. It's an ill wind that blows no good, those who have been wanting to initiate fox hunting around Barrington think, for it is because of the war that it has been possible to obtain these 20 fine foxhounds.

Drag hunting usually is done in this part of the country, but several years ago some Barrington residents discovered there were plenty of foxes in their vicinity. To obtain a pack of foxhounds was difficult, however, for hounds that have been accustomed to drags are not so good for hunting the fox, we are told, and a pack of experienced foxhounds costs a small fortune.

War Forces English to Reduce Their Packs.

Consequently the Barrington fox hunting enthusiasts, including the Edgerton Throckmortons and Dr. and Mrs. Paul Magnuson, contented themselves with occasionally going fox hunting with two and a half couple of American hounds that belong to the Throckmortons. Denison B. Hull, joint master of the Longmeadow hunt with Clark Lawrence, has been anxious to do some real fox hunting for some years, so he became interested in the Barringtonians' experiment.

Shortly after the beginning of the war all the English packs were reduced sharply, due to the shortage of feed. Further retrenchment became necessary, however, and English authorities feared that the preservation of the breed would be seriously impaired if something wasn't done. Consequently, it was decided to sell some of the best of the breed to hunting enthusiasts in this country. Mr. Hull has been in correspondence with A. Henry Higginson, formerly of Boston, for several months, and it was thru him that Mr. Hull obtained the ten couple of hounds that now belong to the Fox River Valley Hunt association.

Hounds Are from Some of Most Famous Packs.

One couple comes from the Duke of Beaufort's famous pack at Badminton, Gloucestershire; another is from the South Dorset hunt, and the others are from the well known Tiverton hunt.

The Magnusons and the Throckmortons have "paneled" an extensive area in the vicinity of their farms in Dundee and Barrington townships, and by next autumn it is hoped that about 40 square miles will be conditioned for fox hunting.

Mr. Hull is to be the master of the Fox River Valley hunt and Mr. Throckmorton is the president. R. Donald Bateman is vice president, Harold Byron Smith, treasurer, and Miss Virginia Cardwell, secretary. The four hounds that already are here are in Mr. Hull's kennels that adjoin his stables in Northbrook. The newcomers will join them and will remain there until the new hunt has erected kennels.

Miss Jean Lamson to Be Married This Afternoon.

Miss Jean Lamson and Henry Erlandsen Hebbeln of San Francisco, will be married at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Hubbard Woods home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren A. Lamson. The Rev. Samuel Harkness of the Winnetka Congregational church will read the service in the presence of the families and close friends. A large reception will follow.

Two former Cornell classmates of Mr. Hebbeln have come for the wedding, Kenneth Wilson of Montreal and Byron Lynch of Barneveld, N. Y. Mrs. Lynch accompanied her husband. A third classmate, Robert Barker, is to be the best man. The bride's sister, Mrs. Richard Searles, will be the matron of honor.

Mr. Hebbeln and his bride will drive west, via New Mexico, in a station wagon on their wedding trip. They are to make their home in Sausalito, Cal.

Chicago relatives of Miss Elizabeth Ann Poole, daughter of the Ernest Pooles of Franconia, N. H., have received word of her marriage in London last Wednesday, May 22, to Henry Robert Lanchester of London. Mr. Poole accompanied his daughter abroad for her marriage, and may stay on in England to write. The Lanchesters will reside in London.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Getz were expected home yesterday from Greenwich, Conn., where they went for the wedding last Saturday of Miss Linda Jane Sherer and Stanley Reed Morton. Mrs. Getz was matron of honor for the bride, whose parents, the Albert William Sherers, formerly lived in Chicago. Mr. Morton and his bride will reside in Worcester, Mass.

Former Dorothy Schmidt Here Visiting Mother.

Mrs. Otto Teegen, the former Dorothy Schmidt, has arrived from New York for a visit with her mother, Mrs. Frederick M. Schmidt, and is in the midst of a whirl of small parties. Mrs. Teegen brought her 1½ year old daughter, Carola, with her. They will return to New York the middle of next month.

Mrs. Dorothy Liebes is at the Drake for a brief stay on her way home to San Francisco from New York. Mrs. James W. Thorne, who had planned to accompany Mrs. Liebes west, leaving on Friday, has decided to postpone visiting the west coast fair until later in the season.

Karl Ouren's Norse Scenes Put on Display

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Those who would like to see Norway as it was before the tragedy of this spring swept over it will do well to turn into the offices of the Norwegian-America Line agency, 333 North Michigan avenue, where there is an exhibit of landscapes and seascapes by Karl Ouren, a member of the Palette and Chisel club and a well known Chicago painter. These pictures are from a recent stay in Norway and show again the quiet beauty of the country's rugged coast and little fishing towns.

An amusing exhibit of water colors by Jack Schurch has opened in the Marshall Field galleries to run thru June 1. The pictures are kindly caricatures of Mexican life, chiefly; a few are based on such American celebrities as Jack Dempsey. The Mexican paintings are well done, colorful and amusing. They seem to us excellent material for an illustrated tale of the land below the border, a sophisticated tale and a roistering one.

The traveling fellowships given each year to five students of the school of the Art institute have been announced. One went to a girl, a student in sculpture, Lorraine Marianelli, who was awarded the John Quincy Adams Fellowship of $1,000. Charles Buckley was given the James Nelson Raymond fellowship of $2,000; Harold Kramer the Edward L. Ryerson fellowship of $1,750; Adolph Goutman the Anna Louise Raymond fellowship of $1,500, and Raymond Calkins the William M. R. French scholarship of $750.

The work of the successful students will be a part of the school show that opens early in June in the east wing galleries of the Art institute.

★ THRU THE LOOKING GLASS ★

It's an admirable commentary on Americans that men and teen age youngsters are quietly and consistently joining the great army of women who use deodorants and antiperspirants. We're pretty fastidious people. Thank heaven!

Right now, of course, with warm weather just around the corner, every careful individual is taking greater pains than ever to keep perspiration and its disagreeable odor well under control.

Naturally, we all have preferences where the helpful preparations are concerned, just as we have in soaps, creams, and lipsticks. Some like liquids, some like creams. Some insist on antiperspirants, others prefer that what they use merely deodorize. And every one dislikes the preparation that irritates the skin—though this is a matter of individual sensitivity, impossible for the manufacturer to control or foresee.

A thoroughly satisfactory product we've found is a greaseless, odorless cream that safely checks perspiration and deodorizes. It's effective for quite a long time, but you can use it as often as you like with complete assurance that it will not affect fabric or irritate the skin. It is applied like any cream and dries rather quickly, and just a dab does the trick. You don't have to slather it on.

Entirely aside from using a preparation like this on the score of fastidiousness, it's a comfort because it is such a protection for your clothes. No perspiration stains and no perspiration odors—both of which are just about impossible to remove satisfactorily. It's the most inexpensive kind of daintiness insurance.

Strawberry Pickers in the Ozarks.

The cedars were casting exaggerated shadows as we forded the creek and swept into the sloping Harbor farm yard two miles from Bald Knob, Ark. Elizabeth Harbor, wife of Phelon and mother of Seth, came to greet us. The men folks, she told us, had taken a wagon load of strawberries into town. We could find them, if we was a-mind to, for they were driving one dun colored mule and a mouse colored one, and the running gears of the wagon were new. Or, she said, we could wait!

• • •

I was glad the Jedge decided to wait. Out in the grassy barn-lot, relaxing under spreading sycamores and peering from tumbledown buildings, were twenty-odd men, women, and children whom I wished to meet—migratory strawberry pickers! I eased thru the gate, camera in hand, and made for the group under the trees. One gangling, barefooted girl in a pink sunbonnet and calico dress was shy, and one tall, rawboned man definitely didn't want his "pitcher tooken by no one, by cracky!" The others thought that little camera that you helt up to yore eye was fun, and clustered around to look thru it between pictures.

Most of the strawberry pickers ("hands," the growers call them) were young folks in their late teens, with a few older men and women and a half dozen youngsters. They were as clean, cheerful, and lighthearted as a picnic crowd. The strawberry season had just begun, the berries were fine, and even Frances Christie (age 18 and mother of an 8 month old baby), pretty and shapely as a chorus girl, who was picking berries for the first time, had picked 31 quarts that day.

Strawberry growers select their "hands" from the horde of berry pickers that flock in at the opening of the season. They pay 2 cents a quart for picking, and in addition furnish some sort of housing for the hands, along with cooking facilities and crude tables and benches. The hands furnish their own food and do their own cooking.

• • •

In the old tool house on the Harbor farm nine were being bedded on pallets spread on the floor, the patchwork coverlets making a bright patterned rug. Four more were occupying the boarded-up shed. The smokehouse held two double beds, a big cook stove and a table, accommodations for four. Five more hands were in one section of the barn, and a young couple with two babies had an "apartment" in the same building. Out back three men lived in a tent and cooked over an open fire. From a large cabin beside the berry patch other hands poured like Keystone cops out of a model T when we went up to take a shot of the berry rows. . . .

• • •

All too soon Seth and Phelon came home, the pickers trooped to their cabins, and our business was transacted. When at last we drove out of the farm yard the soft, warm Ozark evening air was filled with the fragrance of the hands' wood fires, frying side meat, hominy, and Johnny cakes. Under the sycamores Jack and another handsome lad were strumming "gittars" while other boys and a half dozen girls, with permanents and blue overalls, were singing "Birmingham Jail" in soft, slurring voices . . . a prelude to the big sing in which all would take part after supper. They waved gay good-byes to us when we forded the creek. All the way home we wondered if many a millionaire wouldn't give his wealth to be young again and have a job picking strawberries in Arkansas in May. It would help, too, if he were handsome and able to pick a mean guitar.

Swivel Socks Newest Fancy This Summer

BY REA SEEGER.

Rounding up supplies of sports socks for a summertime of fun or looking and finding new ideas will take a morning's time unless you have enjoyed a sneak preview of the finds. The newest whimsey that turns out to be not as whimsical as was scheduled are swivel socks, named after those comfortable office chairs occupied by the best tycoons. Swivel socks have no heels, they're a trick pair of socks that slide on the feet, and you achieve the heel yourself. The sock turns obligingly each time you pull them on, if you wear a hole in the heel you merely slide it around [after it's mended] and start a new heel. The color range is limitless.

The long socks that anchor snugly and firmly right under rosy pink knees are extremely popular with a lot of shoppers. Two patterns are available, a neat ribbed effect and a fancier jacquard pattern. Lastex woven into the band around the top is the assurance that these new long English type socks will stay in position.

Cottons and lisles make the best of the summer socks . . . solid colors vie with gaudy stripes and checks. For the lass who craves a bit of Scotch accent for play clothes or spectator sports clothes there are some exhilarating numbers called "Lady Scott" with authentic plaids in gay color to contrast the white toes and heels. These summer socks have extremely modest price tags, some are priced three for a dollar.

Fashion photograph. . . . A summer classic in smooth tootal linen uses soot black highlighted with a snowy white underblouse. The short flared skirt is stitched for trim, buttons down the front and accents the short sleeved semifitted jacket. Vivid red boutonnière marks the tailored lapel. The same suit comes in other street shades and white.

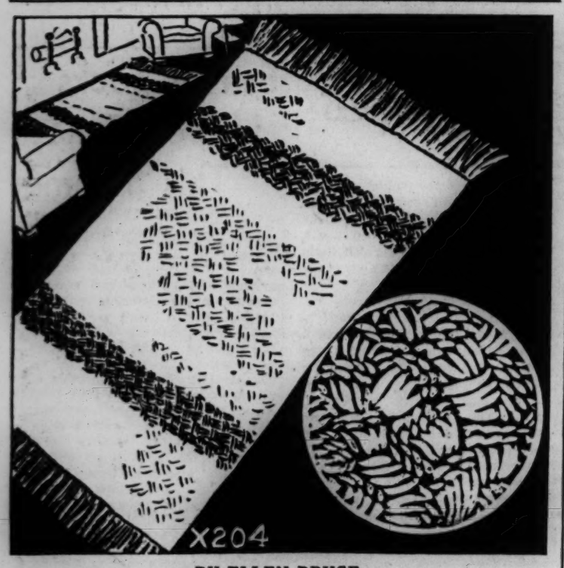
Rug Done in 'Crazy' Stitch



BY ELLEN BRUCE.

Crazy stitches are not as silly as the name would imply, and they are not difficult to accomplish. The crocheted rug, done in one of the many varieties of the stitch, creates one of the most attractive and durable pieces of floor covering. With carpet warp used double, bands of black and white form the border, with the central panel of the rug worked in a combination of black and white. These rugs are ideal for any room in the house, and may be made in any color scheme by virtue of the boilproof materials on the market.

For instructions in crocheting the rug in crazy stitch design, No. X-204, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	1 no trump	Pass
2 diamonds	Pass	2 spades	Pass
4 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

Altho South had four and one-half honor tricks, including plus values in the spade jack and diamond queen, his hand, as a whole, did not warrant a forcing rebid over North's negative no trump. Hence the mere two diamond rebid was correct, on the basis that North would have to be able to give at least a preference for spades before a game contract could be considered reasonably safe. When North did give that preference South, of course, lost no time in getting up to game in spades.

West opened the heart king. Dummy's ace won and declarer then rattled off five spade tricks, hoping that if either defender had more than three diamonds he might discard one to hold a stopper in another suit. This did not occur, however. West had four diamonds, all right, but held on to them to the bitter end. East signaled with the nine of clubs on the third round of trumps, so West felt safe in blanking his club king and discarding one heart. After all, his trumps were gone declarer hopefully laid down the A-K-Q of diamonds and was thoroly disgusted when it developed that West had the suit stopped. Obviously, there was nothing to be done but concede three club tricks and one diamond to the enemy, for the defeat of the contract.

North, the erstwhile dummy, was inclined to be sarcastic about his partner's line of play. "Why didn't you test the diamond situation before drawing all my trumps?" he asked.

South snorted derisively. "I suppose I should have risked the lead of the A-K-Q of diamonds while there was a trump still at large," he sneered.

Sneer or no sneer, that is precisely what South should have done. Obviously, he was afraid to lead three rounds of diamonds while either opponent had a trump, because if the diamonds did not break 3-3, the third round might be ruffed. What he overlooked was that his own line of play depended on a 3-3 diamond break to an even greater degree. The proper technique in standard situations such as this is to draw exactly two rounds of trumps, leaving dummy with one trump, then to attempt to cash the three top diamonds. If the diamond suit does not break 3-3 it may well be [as it was in this case] that the opponent who is out of diamonds on the third round is also out of trumps. Then the third diamond will not only hold but declarer is in a position to ruff the fourth and losing diamond. If he delays the cashing of his top diamonds until the trumps are gone, it is quite true that he avoids the possibility of a ruff, but he makes absolutely no provision for his fourth diamond.

Settlement Benefit to Be Directed by Women of Winnetka

Instead of having a general chairman for its annual fall fashion show this year the Winnetka board of Northwestern University settlement is to have an executive committee that will be responsible for the success of its important benefit. The show will be held on Friday afternoon, Sept. 27, at the New Trier High school auditorium.

Mrs. Harold Barnes, president of the board; Mrs. Austin Jenner, Mrs. Richard Aishton, Mrs. Edward H. Hicks Jr., and Mrs. Fred W. Fairman compose the executive committee.

Some changes they have decided upon are to eliminate a special feature to close the show and concentrate instead on making the tea that will follow a jolly party, and to limit the number of models to 50. Instead of having other young women to act as ushers the New Trier students who regularly usher in the auditorium will take over for the afternoon.

Field Museum Names Hall in Honor of Ryersons

A hall in the Field museum heretofore known as the Hall of Plant Life was renamed by the board of trustees yesterday in honor of the late Martin A. Ryerson and his wife, Carrie, who made many notable gifts to the museum during their lifetimes and in their wills. Mr. Ryerson was one of the original incorporators of the museum and was first vice president from its founding in 1893 to his death in 1932. The hall, to be known as the Martin A. and Carrie Ryerson hall, is the largest in the department of botany.

You can use canned whole kernel corn or the cream style corn to make corn fritters for tomorrow's luncheon. Cream style corn makes "cornier" fritters, at least by our recipe, for there's more corn in 'em. Take your choice of these two good formulas.

Corn Fritters with Whole Kernel Corn.

[Serves Four.]
1 cup sifted flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg
½ cup milk
½ cup whole kernel corn
1 tablespoon melted butter

Sift dry ingredients together. Combine egg yolk, milk, corn, and butter. Add to flour and stir until smooth. Beat egg white stiff and fold it in. Drop the batter by spoonfuls into deep fat heated to 370 degrees and fry until golden brown. Drain on soft paper and serve hot.

Corn Fritters with Cream Style Corn.

[Serves Four.]
1 No. 2 can cream style corn
1½ cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs, separated

Sift flour, baking powder, salt, and pepper together and add to corn. Stir in beaten egg yolks and fold in stiffly beaten whites. Drop into deep hot fat [370 degrees] and fry until fritters are golden brown, about 3 minutes. Drain on soft paper.

Fritters may be kept hot in the oven at times when it is necessary to hold them a few minutes before serving. And remember that corn fritters are delicious with chicken gravy, as well as with maple sirup.

Fresh ham roast for tomorrow's dinner is cooked as is any piece of roasting pork, in a 325 degree oven, uncovered, for about 35 minutes to the pound. Since pork always must be thoroly cooked, it is well to use a meat thermometer to gauge doneness. The thermometer will register 185 degrees internal temperature when the roast is done to a turn. Modern meat thermometers may be read at a glance, and they indicate plainly the proper temperatures for the kind of meat you are cooking, whether it be pork, veal, beef, or lamb.

Apples aren't very good at this time of year, so we'd best use canned applesauce to go with the pork. Besides, canned applesauce is ready to serve, with no preparation other than zipping it out of the can and into the serving dish.

PINEAPPLE, CUCUMBER, AND OLIVE SALAD.

Combine equal parts diced chilled pineapple and diced crisp cucumber. Slice a few stuffed olives and add with mayonnaise to moisten. Serve on shredded lettuce, leaf lettuce, or watercress.

Eggnog Pie.

1 tablespoon gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1¼ cups hot milk
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ cup sherry wine
2 eggs, separated
6 tablespoons sugar
½ cup cream, whipped
Baked pie shell

Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Add hot milk and stir until dissolved. Cool and add salt, nutmeg, and wine. Chill until slightly thickened. Beat egg whites and yolks separately. Beat half the sugar into the stiffly beaten whites, and the other half into the yolks, beaten until thick and light. Fold whites, yolks, and whipped cream into thickening gelatin mixture, fill pie shell, and chill until firm. Top with more whipped cream and a sprinkle of nutmeg to serve.

YEH! LET'S JUST SUPPOSE WE WERE GOING ON A HONEYMOON TOGETHER—WOULD YOU CHOOSE THE SEASHORE OR THE MOUNTAINS?

Demure and Feminine Frock

WOMAN'S AND MISS' DRESS.

Demure femininity is the keynote of this girlish and youthful dress for daytime wear. It will go to the office as well as on "dates" and to afternoon affairs. It's quite simple to make, and requires a minimum of inexpensive cotton, silk or linen. Use sheers, if you like, and the dress may be plain, striped or figured. One version has no collar, but is trimmed with bows at neckline and on sleeves. The other model has a contrasting shirtwaist collar. Lines are princess, and a belt is optional.

Style No. 3097 is designed for sizes 12, 14, and 16, and 36, 38, and 40 inch bust measurements. Size 16 requires 4 yards of 39 inch material for either version; ⅝ yard for contrasting collar.

Address orders for Clotilde patterns to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central annex, NEW YORK CITY, including 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be sure to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Self-Pity Is a Guaranteed Way to Win Ostracism

BY DORIS BLAKE.

[Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Are there any worse bores among your acquaintances than those victims of self-pity whose conversation is one long recital of woes?

If they affect us so, we'd better watch our step so that we, too, don't get the habit. It's a communicable "disease," one that has to be watched out for.

In a letter before us, from a married woman, we see all the earmarks of a woman who expects to be crowned for her martyrdom. We'll wager that her husband and her grown daughters deserve the crown. We won't go into the details of the woman's groanings, because there's nothing legitimate about them. If her family doesn't understand her, it's her fault, not theirs.

After all, couldn't most of us feel that we are an unappreciated lot? People aren't standing around handing us floral offerings, either. They're not even taking time trying to understand what "buried us," the noble, grand character we fancy ourselves to be.

No, self-pity is a menacing thing, even in its infant stage, which is the time to catch it. Admitting any of its causes is no more, no less, than a confession we've made a mess of our lives. Self-pity gets one nowhere. Indeed, it ruins one's prospects of ever getting anywhere.

Adviser Tells Right Way of Discipline

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

How do you try to get results with the children? I mean, how do you try to get them to do what you want them to do for practical and convenient purposes, and also for what you consider their good?

Do you repeat the same thing over and over again, "dinning" away at them?

Do you find yourself using a commanding voice and manner, ordering them to do this and that?

Do you complain and reproach them for not listening, or actually disobeying?

Do you, feeling futile, say you'll tell their father?

Do you find yourself coaxing and cajoling?

Do you threaten them with punishment if they don't do what you tell them to?

Do you, instead, bribe them in order to get immediate results?

Or do you, perhaps, in futility and desperation, fly into a temper and do things you later regret when you've regained your self control?

All those ways are wrong ways.

First, your child must learn to conform to what you ask for his own good: his health, his happiness, his character.

Then you try to gain his "coöperation" in a loving, wise way.

You keep control of yourself even when you feel exasperated and tired.

You ask him courteously to do things instead of ordering him about.

W-G-N to Introduce "Your Music I. Q." New Quiz Program

"Your Music I. Q.," a 15 minute radio quiz program, will make its debut at 8:45 p. m. Monday over station W-G-N. It is sponsored by the Ravinia Festival association and will be heard every Monday at that hour.

Three members of the Ravinia association will vie with three members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra in answering questions concerning music on each program—the personnel of the teams being changed each week.

The public is invited to submit questions. Every person whose question is used will receive two admissions to Ravinia park, where the music season begins June 25. If the question is missed by one of the two teams, the person submitting it also will get two reserved seats. If the question stumps both teams, the sender will get a $10 coupon book of admissions to the park.

Answers should be sent with the questions, which should deal with composers of symphonic music, recognition of themes, music history queries, and the naming of compositions.

Another Young Artist Joins Spring Parade

BY CECIL SMITH.

The late spring has a way of bringing with it a succession of young singers, eager to take a flier in public performance, but unable to measure in advance the extent of their attainments.

The newest participant in this annual game of chance is Virginia Wilson, mezzo-soprano, who gave a fairly definitive account of herself in Kimball hall last night with a program stretching from Jacopo Peri [1600] to Charles Richard [1940], and drawing upon the resources of the four standard languages of song.

Like many another spring debutante, Miss Wilson could not read the auguries clearly, or she would have deferred her recital for at least a couple of years. Her vocal production is exceedingly naive, and cannot yet be termed an established method. A voice that may well develop attractive aspects later on is now white and breathy, and lapses aimlessly from pitch on frequent occasions.

Charles Elferie, Miss Wilson's accompanist, contributed a piano group by Chopin and Albeniz, in which he showed considerable facility, but seemed to recognize no better guide to interpretation than the passing intuition of the moment.

A performance of Verdi's "Rigoletto" will be presented by Nicola Berardinelli in the Civic Opera house Saturday evening. Mr. Berardinelli will sing Rigoletto. Other members of the cast will be Nancy Reeder, Norbert Holterman, and Charles Hax. Silvio Insana will conduct.

YOUNG ARTISTS SERIES

The Young American Artists series brought its first season to a close in Curtiss hall last night with an exceptionally attractive program, presenting in joint debut recital Jeanette Risler, pianist, and Charles Fischman, flutist. Robert Macdonald was the latter's excellent accompanist.

Concert flutists are rare, and it was a pleasure to hear the instrument in music that exploits it for extended solo work. Moreover, Mr. Fischman took the opportunity of his debut to present some important contemporary pieces—Casella's Sicilienne and Burlesque, the Andante from Ibert's Concerto for flute and piano and Hindemith's Sonata for the same combination of instruments.

The last of these was given its first performance in Chicago. It is one of a series of sonatas the German composer is writing for various instruments, and it was premièred a few years ago at a Library of Congress festival. Both the Casella and Ibert works showed off the composers favorably and constituted refreshing music in the ordinary routine of local concerts.

Mr. Fischman played the flute extremely well, getting a good tone and being able to sustain long phrases. The tone was not as sensuous as it obviously will be when he is more experienced, but he played his music with understanding and knew where to build the climaxes in the lengthy melodic lines.

Miss Risler played the piano with a good deal of intellectual and musical authority which usually found her technique equal to the demands she made upon it. Aside from a beautiful tone the distinguishing characteristic of her playing was its clarity. This was put to good use in numbers by Scarlatti and Chopin. In works by Liszt and Ravel, where bravura and impressionistic effects were called for, this clarity seemed almost a handicap. R. E.

CARDINALS SHUT OUT CUBS, 5-0; SOX LOSE TWO

HAMMER OLSEN; LANIER ALLOWS ONLY FOUR HITS

Defense Bogs Down on Rookie.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Max Lanier, a left handed member of the St. Louis Gas House gang, threw curves, speed, and incidentally whitewash at the Cubs yesterday. His offerings literally were bubbling over with deception, so the Cubs, despite nine innings of fervent bat swinging, picked up only four hits and a 5 to 0 beating in the second game of the series in Wrigley field. It was the Cubs' second shut-out of the season, the other having been administered by Ike Pearson of the Phillies.

The Cubs also had a left hander in action. The luckless lad was Freshman Vern Olsen, making his second big league start. Because of the Gas House gang's tactics Olsen's efforts were limited to six innings. In that session the Cards, after five unproductive innings, touched off a few bombs, the Cub defense wabbled, and four runs went across. The other enemy run was put together in the seventh when Vance Page was engaged in the rôle of a finisher.

Two Reach Second.

Lanier put a crimp in the age old theory that it takes right handed batters to successfully combat southpaws. Jim Gleeson, a switch hitter, was stationed in left field, supplanting Bill Nicholson, and Augie Galan, another turn around batter, swung from the right side. This left Hack the only port side swinger in the starting ensemble, but nevertheless only two Chicagoans went as far as second base, one in the first inning and the other in the ninth. During the seven intervening rounds only two Cubs even traveled to first base, one on an error.

Olsen's first five innings netted the Cardinals only one hit, a bunt, but the effort apparently exhausted the youngster's skill. In the sixth the Cards' total suddenly shot up to four, the bats of Ducky Medwick and Terry Moore helping to bury the freshman after hits by Eddie Lake and Enos Slaughter had paved the way. Medwick also drove home the Cards' seventh inning run off Page.

Hack Buys Brooklyn Bridge.

Hack was guilty of a slight mistake in the first inning or the Cubs might have been able to give Olsen a lead. Hack led off with a line single to left and Medwick, after trapping the ball, held it aloft. This apparently fooled Hack into believing it had been caught, and he just jogged toward second. He was greatly surprised when trapped and tagged out. After Herman had been retired Galan walked and Leiber singled to center, a hit that would have helped Hack if he had been anyhere but on the bench. Gleeson ended the inning by grounding to Orengo.

Olsen served so pleasingly for a while that only three of the enemy had reached base in the first five innings. One of this trio was Lake, who opened the game by walking. The next three men grounded into force plays. Orengo became a base runner in the second. He beat out a bunt with two gone and was forced by Owen. There wasn't another Redbird on base until the fourth, when Mize walked after two were out, and he was the last until the deluge in the sixth.

That Fatal Sixth.

The opening item in the four run sixth was Lake's single to left and he immediately was promoted to second by S. Martin's bunt. Olsen got a bum break on Slaughter's roller, which hopped away from Russell. Medwick slipped a single over Herman's head, Lake scoring, and Slaughter reaching third ahead of Leiber's throw, which gave Medwick time to dash to second. Mize slapped an ordinary bounder to Russell, but

Dodgers Whip Phillies, 4 to 2, for 5th in Row

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 28 (AP).—The Dodgers reinforced their claim to first place in the National league tonight by whipping the Philadelphia Phillies, 4 to 2, on the six hit pitching of Freddy Fitzsimmons, who has won four without a defeat. Seven errors marred the game for the crowd of 28,918.

It was the first night game ever pitched by the 38 year old knuckleball specialist. The Phillies scored their two runs in the sixth on a single by Art Mahan, a double by Joe Marty and a single by Chuck Klein.

The Dodgers, peppering Hugh Mulcahy and Lloyd Brown for 11 hits, scored twice in the second on Dolph Camilli's single, a double by Babe Phelps and a single by Johnny Hudson, and in the sixth got two more runs on three singles and wild throws by Bob Bragan and Mahan.

The victory was Brooklyn's fifth in a row and gave the Dodgers a half game lead over the Cincinnati Reds. Score:

Rightmire's Speed Wins Decision Over Shapiro

New York, May 28 (AP).—Everett Rightmire, 128½, of Sioux City, Ia., scored a decisive eight round victory over Maxie Shapiro, 128¼, of New York, at the Queensboro arena tonight. Rightmire proved entirely too fast for Shapiro, who had lost only one bout in 43 previous starts. The Iowan won seven of the eight rounds.

Entrants in $50 Freakness Pray for Muddy Track

Baltimore, Md., May 28 (AP).—Take it from Dr. Ward Briggs, stories of a streamlined six legged turtle and a jumping frog masquerading in a shell are hooey.

Briggs is impresario for the Johns Hopkins hospital turtle Derby tomorrow, and the added attraction, the Freakness.

Pre-race reports of sure thing dark horses are false, he said, and "all races are strictly on the level."

Derby winner last year was Nicotine Acid, who stodgily pushed a leather neck to victory over the line of a 30 foot circle. The purse this year is $50, all in nickels, Briggs said.

SAUNDERSTOWN IS VICTORIOUS IN SUNSET HANDICAP

Detroit, Mich., May 28 (AP).—Saunderstown, 6 year old chestnut gelding owned by Allen T. Simmons, led all the way in the $1,200 Sunset handicap, the feature race of today's card at the fair grounds.

Jockey Eddie Dew got Saunderstown away fast and the victor finished a length and one-half in front of Hoptown Lass, who was making her first start since last Oct. 20. Biscayne Blue, the favorite who was running for the first time in almost a year, was a head farther back.

BLOOMERS HELD TO ONE HIT AS ROCKOLAS WIN

Renee Sweet, the feminine fireball hurler imported from Memphis, held the Bloomer Girls to one hit as the Rockola team won a 2 to 0 decision in a Girls' Major Softball league contest in Parichy stadium last night. Rose Clayton, center fielder, doubled with two on base to give the Rockola team its third league victory. Jeannette Reid was the losing pitcher.

Red Sox Rally in Night Game; Beat A's, 4 to 1

Philadelphia, Pa., May 28 (AP).—Bunching six of their 14 hits in the last two innings to break a 1 to 1 tie, the Boston Red Sox scored three runs to beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 4 to 1, before 27,151 in Shibe Park tonight.

The defeat was the fifth straight for the A's. Johnny Babich, seeking his third straight victory over the league leaders, pitched brilliantly until the eighth when Rog Cramer led off with a two bagger. After Ted Williams walked, Jimmy Foxx singled to right, but Wally Moses' great throw got Cramer at the plate. Manager Joe Cronin then squeezed Williams home with the winning run.

In the ninth Jim Tabor tripled and scored on Eugene Desautels' single. After Lou Finney singled, Ed Heusser replaced Babich. An infield single by Cramer and Williams' long fly scored Desautels.

The As scored their only run in the first inning on Moses' triple and Tabor's error. Dennis Galehouse limited the As to eight hits.

3 BEAT DEADLINE TO QUALIFY FOR 500 MILE RACE

It's In, Out and In Again for French Drivers.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 28 (AP).—Thirty-one American drivers, one Argentine, and a Frenchman with a damaged car will make up the starting field Thursday for the 28th running of the 500 mile race at the Indianapolis Motor speedway.

The French entry is the Italian Maserati driven by Rene Lebegue, a French soldier. The car threw a piston arm thru the crankshaft this morning. Bernard Musnik, manager of the French team, first said the car could not be repaired. Then he said it could be repaired.

A third statement was that it would be possible to transfer to Lebegue's car the motor used in the one driven by Rene Dreyfus, eliminated today by qualifiers with superior speed.

Three Crowded Out.

Musnik declared Lebegue's car "will be repaired in time for the race." He said Lebegue "will start the car" and that Dreyfus would serve as "alternate driver."

Thirty-six cars qualified for the classic, but three, including Dreyfus' machine, were crowded out today by entries making faster qualifying speeds. Only 33 cars may start.

Others eliminated were those driven by Louis Durant of Herrington, Kas., and Tony Willman of Milwaukee.

Billy Devore of St. John, Kas., and Floyd Davis of Springfield, Ill., won starting places today. Willman eliminated Durant and then, in turn, was eliminated by Davis.

Devore, driving the same car in which Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis won the 1937 race, showed the best time today. He ran his 10 miles at 122.179 miles an hour. Davis' speed was 120.797 miles an hour.

Average Speed Slower.

Willman turned his 10 miles at 118.914 miles an hour. His first two laps were run at approximately 123 miles an hour, but motor trouble slowed him to 115 on each of the next two turns of the oval.

The average qualifying speed for the 33 starters was slightly under 123 miles an hour — slower than the 123.356 average a year ago.

There was the usual last minute rush to qualify. Henry Banks of Royal Oak, Mich., took the starting flag seconds before the 5 p. m. deadline. He ran one lap at 114 miles an hour and was flagged in.

Overton Phillips of Los Angeles made two attempts in the closing hours, but never could get his car up to the required 115 miles an hour.

List of 33 Qualifiers.

The Economist.

We find the great economist,
Who seven days a week advises,
Capitulates, and analyzes.
Without emerging from his lair
Or moving from his easy chair.
He can inform the cockeyed orb
How much rye flour it will absorb,
And give the acreage of hay
For 1910 in Paraguay.
The nation's progress he defines
Upon large charts with dotted lines;
He knows how much the people spend,

The future of herbaceous foods;
His skill survives the hardest test—
The little trick that he does best
Is to explain to farm and town,
Why stocks and bonds are up or down.
If they are low, he can descry
Good reasons why they should be high;
If they are high, he likes to show
He'll say he told you all along—
Economists are never wrong.

Hoping.

They looked so big and strong,
Carrying on their broad young backs
Their helmets and their heavy packs.
And tho they had marched for miles and miles
They did not think of grim tomorrows,
But gally they sang of anything
But soon the rhythm of their feet,
As they marched with an even beat,
Grew more faint, then faded away,
As round a bend they went on their way.
And when they had gone I began to pray
That God might protect them in the fray;
That He might listen to our prayers
And free us from these troubles and cares;
That He might listen to our pleas
And grant us an eternal peace.

These Little Things.

These little things can free my heart from pain—
The heavy scent of lilacs after rain,
A robin singing high up in a tree
The fragrance of red roses in a vase

Chicagoans Drop to Fifth Place.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., May 28.—The White Sox staggered thru their first doubleheader of the year this afternoon and when it was all over along about nightfall, they had lost both games to the Browns, 10 to 9 and 7 to 5. The defeats were the fourth and fifth suffered at the hands of the Browns in seven games this year. Last year the Browns beat the Sox four times in 22 engagements.

John [Ace] Rigney lasted long enough in the first game to be charged with his sixth defeat. Jack Knott was the starting and losing pitcher in the second game.

The double plastering sent the Sox spinning out of fourth place into fifth, only three percentage points ahead of the Browns. The Chicagoans surrendered fourth place to the Yankees.

Homers Are Wasted.

In the first game, Eric McNair's fourth homer of the year and Joe Kuhel's ninth were wasted. In the second game, Mike Kreevich's and Larry Rosenthal's second homers of the season went for naught. The Sox made 16 hits in the first game and 10 in the second, so individually, they probably figured it was a great afternoon.

The Sox played like refugees from an opium den in the first game until they had spotted the Browns a 7 to 0 edge in four innings and a 9 to 1 advantage in six innings. Then they came to life for six hits and five runs in the seventh, one in the eighth, and two in the ninth. The only trouble was that the Browns had added their 10th and winning run after two were out in the seventh.

In the second game, the Chicagoans reversed their first game processes by starting strong and fading after the halfway point. They led, 3 to 0, at the end of the second inning and 5 to 3 after their half of the sixth. The Browns polished them off with three in the home sixth and a clincher in the seventh.

FIRST GAME

The Sox revealed in both ends of the first inning of the first game of their first 1940 double-header that they were not accustomed to getting up early in the morning. In the early stages they seemed dazed and far from themselves in every way, except for some spasmodic and tardy hitting.

With one out in the first inning, Kuhel singled to left. Kreevich singled to right and in failing to make a shoestring catch, Hoag cuffed the ball toward the infield. Heffner had the ball as Kuhel rounded second, but Joe kept on running. He was out by 20 or 30 feet. Wright singled to center, Kreevich stopping at second. Appling tapped to Heffner.

Appling Has a Time of It.

Despite the obvious fact Rigney had the wabbles, the Browns should not have scored any of their three runs in the first inning. With one down, Judnich singled to center and stopped at second on McQuinn's single to center. Radcliff rolled what appeared to be a cinch double play to McNair. Eric threw to Appling to force McQuinn, but Appling got the ball caught in the web of his glove, stumbled on the bag, then got his right foot caught on top of his left. While this was going on, Judnich got to third and Radcliff to first. Hoag then knocked his homer to the roof of the right field pavilion, scoring behind Judnich and Radcliff.

McQuinn's first homer of the game, his fourth of the year, made it 5 to 0 for the Browns in the third. Judnich opened with a single and scored ahead of McQuinn when George drove the

MR. WOOD COMES INTO HIS OWN AS A GOLFER AT 38

New York, May 28 (AP).—Two years ago, Craig Wood, by his own admission, was a finished golfer, literally speaking. He couldn't putt and he couldn't score. He failed to qualify for the National Open and the P. G. A. At 36, he was washed up, and for his years of competition he had only heartaches as memories.

He had come so close, so often, yet he had never won a major championship. In 1933 he tied for the British open crown; in 1934 he lost in the P. G. A. in a 38 hole final; in 1935 he tied for the Masters; in 1939 he tied for the national open championship. He lost in the playoff in each of the events.

Yet today Wood rates as an outstanding threat for the national open tournament June 6, 7, and 8 in Cleveland, and any who doubt his right to the rating have only to ponder his phenomenal 264 score in the Metropolitan open last week-end.

Never Too Old to Learn.

He stood on the soggy sod near the ninth tee at the Mount Vernon Country club yesterday, just another fan watching less fortunate brethren attempt to win one of the 17 national open places available for the New York district. Between congratulatory greetings from rivals and spectators he sandwiched in remarks about his game.

"Yes sir," he admitted, "two years ago I was washed up. But I dug in and practiced. I changed my grip, too, and every once in a while now I get the perfect feel—that I can't hook or I can't slice. I had that feel during the Metropolitan. I didn't three putt a green, altho I might have had a 257 if some putts had dropped."

Wood finished last in the Goodall round robin tournament just a week ago. His right about face is one of those unexplainable mysteries of golf.

It Was Quite a Feat.

Jimmy Hines won the Metropolitan open three years ago over the same course—Forest Hills in Bloomfield, N. J.—with a 279. This year he was only two strokes back of that figure, with a 281, yet he was 17 strokes behind Wood.

The Forest Hill course, normally a par 71, had been cut to par 70 for the tournament, and Wood's rounds of 64-66-68 and 66 left him 16 strokes under par for the four rounds.

Aron to Fight for Title in Bout July 17

Chairman Joe Triner and Commissioner Sheldon Clark of the Illinois boxing commission have granted Irving Schoenwald July 17 on which to promote a welterweight championship bout in Comiskey park between Milt Aron, No. 1 contender, and an antagonist to be named by the National Boxing association. Schoenwald was negotiating for a title contest involving Aron and Champion Henry Armstrong, but Armstrong has seen fit to ignore the offer in favor of an overweight match with Lew Jenkins in New York July 17.

Armstrong had until yesterday to sign to defend his belt against Aron. Failure to do so has caused the N. B. A. to take steps to vacate his championship and select a challenger to meet Aron for the right to be called new champion.

Postpone Cavanna Bout.

Aron is in Philadelphia, where he was scheduled to fight Frankie Cavanna on Monday. The contest was postponed until next Monday because of inclement weather.

The N. B. A. also was scheduled to take action yesterday against Al Hostak, middleweight champion, for failing to get together with Ceferino Garcia. However, the situation has changed following Garcia's recent elimination at the hands of Ken Overlin. The association now may designate Tony Zale of Gary as foremost contender in place of Garcia in view of Zale's knockout of Ben Brown on March 29. The victory came three months after Overlin was held to a draw by Brown in Atlanta, Ga.

Seek Sub for Sheppard.

Promoter Alex Veck is seeking a substitute for Jimmy Sheppard, Peoria middleweight, in a 10 round encounter against Anton Christoforidis in the Coliseum June 5. Sheppard asked to be excused because of a prior engagement in Miami, Fla., June 3. . . . Clarence Brown, former Catholic Youth organization heavyweight champion, suspended for refusing to answer a state commission summons concerning a dispute with Ben Zenoff, his manager, has been reinstated but he must continue to abide by his contract with Zenoff. . . . Lou Gordon yesterday had his wrestling referee's card renewed. . . . Clarence Rapp, who brought out Johnny Paycheck, has taken interest in a new heavyweight prospect, Barney O'Connell, who is 22 years old and weighs 220 pounds.

Ruth Will Give Exhibition in Mills Stadium

Babe Ruth day will be held at Mills stadium Sunday when Ruth gives a batting exhibition in connection with the Michigan City and Mills game in which Rogers Hornsby will play second base for the Mills.

Batting exhibitions are nothing new for the Babe. Back in 1919 he hit 29 home runs. The year before Wally Pipp of the Yankees had led the American league with eight.

The New York Yankees paid Boston $125,000 for Ruth. Ruth made good for them by hitting 54 home runs in 1920.

Fifty-four home runs was a new record and most opportune for baseball. The Black Sox scandal had left the game greatly in need of something like the graduate from St. Mary's Industrial school in Baltimore to revitalize it.

Ruth hit 714 homers during his 22 year career. In 1927 he hit 60 to set the major league record. He added 15 in world series games, twice hitting three in one game. He received 2,056 bases on balls; struck out 1,330 times; hit two or more home runs in a game 72 times; led the American league in home runs 12 different seasons; hit 50 or more home runs per year four times; hit 40 homers per season 11 times and 30 or more home runs 13 times. He holds the slugging record of .847 for a season—set in 1930.

He participated in 10 world series, three with the Boston Red Sox and seven with the Yankees.

Ruth, Rogers Hornsby, and other players will be on the staff of the Doan's baseball school, which opens in Shewbridge field and Mills stadium Saturday.

Maroons Name 1941 Captains in Two Sports

Joe Stampf, veteran forward, and Art Lopatka, pitcher, were named captains of the Unversity of Chicago's basketball and baseball teams for 1941, Coaches Nelson H. Norgren and Kyle Anderson announced yesterday.

Stampf, who will be a senior next year, led the Big 9½ in free throws last season. He set scoring records at Calumet High school. Lopatka, who also will be a senior, was Chicago's best pitcher this season, altho he failed to win a game. Lopatka, a southpaw, also plays in the outfield when not pitching and is one of the leading Maroon hitters.

WALLACE QUITS AS HEAD COACH AT ST. CHARLES

William T. Wallace, football and basketball coach at St. Charles High school for 15 years, yesterday announced he would retire at the close of the school year to enter business.

St. Charles under Wallace has won five Little Seven conference football championships. It also has ranked high in basketball, tying Dundee in 1935.

Wallace was graduated from Monmouth college in 1923. He coached Lincoln college for a year and attended the University of Illinois. He came to St. Charles in 1925.

YANKS' BIG GUNS BOOM AWAY FOR DOUBLE TRIUMPH

New York, May 28 (AP).—Battling up the hill toward the first division, the world champion Yankees snatched both ends of a double-header from the Washington Senators today, 12 to 4 and 3 to 1, for a record of six victories in their last seven starts.

The first tussle was a slugging adventure, with the Yanks collecting 14 hits and the Senators 12, while the nightcap was a tight pitching duel between Rookie Marvin Breuer of New York and little Rene Monteagudo, Washington's Cuban southpaw. Score:

WAUGH POP AND HAZEL LEE TAKE CRETE FEATURES

Go to Post Favorites and Triumph Handily.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Waugh Pop and Hazel Lee divided the two feature races between them yesterday in Lincoln Fields. Both won handily after going to the post as favorites. Waugh Pop, a 5 year old gelding owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Oros, came home at a canter six lengths ahead of his field in the six furlongs Kankakee purse.

Then Hazel Lee, a 3 year old filly carrying the black and gold colors of E. E. Fogelson, scored by five lengths in the Cottage Grove purse, a dash of a mile. Both events were for horses of the $2,500 class, tho Waugh Pop got a five pound concession in the weights by going in at $2,000.

Ariel Bomb Blows Up.

Hazel Lee, racing at odds of 3 to 2, took command at the break and led all the way without a serious challenge. Cantata, the 7 to 2 second choice, was runner-up with three lengths to spare over Panjab. Backers of Hazel Lee collected $5, $3.20 and $2.20 for win, place, and show.

Waugh Pop, however, had to come up from behind to score his victory after Ariel Bomb, upon which there had been a solid betting plunge, failed to last. This horse, owned by Mrs. A. M. Creech, was backed down to 3 to 1 odds despite the fact that he hadn't been to the post since last October.

Ariel Bomb cut out a good early pace, but showed that he needed more racing before being ready for a winning effort. Relinquishing a lead of nearly two lengths at the head of the stretch, he dropped back to finish seventh.

Meanwhile Waugh Pop, responding to light urging, took full command. Star Bud, which shared the position of 5 to 2 favorite with the winner, was the best of the others, getting in four lengths ahead of the third place horse, Manymor. Waugh Pop returned $7.60, $4 and $2.80.

Track Suits City Boy.

Thomas Platt of Lexington, Ky., tried all last year to win a race with a colt named City Boy, getting one third place out of 15 attempts. This year City Boy was beaten by 17 lengths with the opening of Keeneland and lost twice again at Churchill Downs. In all these efforts he ran on fast tracks and dry tracks, in sloppy going and in the mud.

Yesterday Trainer J. P. Sallee sent him to the post in the mile and a sixteenth first race. The track, drying out slowly after a spell of wet weather, was just the right consistency for City Boy. He finished five lengths ahead of Sir Ajax, who was hard pressed to defend second place against the 2 to 1 favorite, White Feathers. City Boy paid $14.80 to win, $6.40 to place, and $3.60 to show.

Eye Knocker, a filly which has done considerable shifting from one class to another in the last two seasons, was dropped in among some $1,000 horses in the second race. That might have been a slur on her prestige a year ago, but she had about all she could do to handle the assignment yesterday. Carrying the colors of Mrs. J. E. Copenhaver, she got home first by the margin of a neck after a head and head stretch duel with Witan.

Witan Second by a Nose.

It wasn't Witan, however, that was the threat at the finish. Witan was entirely thru, but Prince Sador was charging up so fast that he would have passed both in a few more strides. As it was, he missed second place by a nose. Eye knocker paid off at $7.20, $4.80, and $4.00.

G. F. Woodman's Marbold completed a popular daily double by getting home three lengths ahead of his nearest rival, Kosse, in the third race. The numerous betters who hooked up Eye Knocker and Marbold in the double received $21.40.

Mr. Rigney Departs.

Rigney was led away with none out in the fourth. Heffner opened the inning with a single to left and went to third on a single by Swift. Vernon Kennedy doubled off the right field screen, Heffner scoring and Swift stopping at third. Strange walked, loading the bases, whereupon Rigney was replaced by Ed Weiland. Judnich forced Strange, Swift scoring, after which McQuinn grounded into a double play.

McNair's homer in the fifth put the Sox into the scoring column. Tresh walked, and reached second on a balk. Weiland struck out, after which Bob Kennedy singled to left. Tresh stopping at third. Kuhel walked, loading the bases. Then Kreevich tapped into a double play.

The Browns didn't get to Weiland till two were out in the seventh. Then Judnich walked and scored on McQuinn's second homer of the game. McNair threw out Radcliff.

Sox Put on a Rally.

Despite two walks the Sox failed to score in the sixth but they awakened suddenly after Weiland and R. Kennedy had fouled out in the seventh. Then followed a double by Kuhel, a single by Kreevich, a walk to Wright, a triple by Appling and singles by Rosenthal, McNair, and Turner for a net of five runs. Solters batted for Weiland and fouled to McQuinn, leaving McNair on third and Turner on first.

Orval Grove made his big league debut at the start of the home seventh. After he had pitched three balls and two strikes to Hoag, rain held up the game for 19 minutes. When play was resumed, Hoag walked. Clift and Heffner flied out, but Swift and V. Kennedy knocked singles, Kennedy's scoring Hoag.

After Bob Kennedy had struck out in the eighth, Kuhel knocked his home run. Kreevich singled to left and Wright was safe on Berardino's fumble. Coffman replaced V. Kennedy and Appling tapped into a double play. Grove improved in his second major league inning, the Browns' eighth. He retired Judnich, McQuinn, and Radcliff in order.

SECOND GAME

There was no early inning drowsing by the Sox in the second game. With two down, Kreevich hit a homer into the stand in right center. Wright singled to center and scored on Appling's triple over Radcliff's head. Rosenthal popped to Clift.

McNair opened the second inning with a double to left, took third on Tresh's infield out and scored on Knott's single to left. Kennedy grounded into a double play.

The Browns scored a flukey run in their second. Rosenthal slipped and fell on the wet grass as he was about to grab Hoag's fly and it went for a double. Clift and Berardino flied out but Susce walked and Harris singled to center, scoring Hoag. Strange flied to Rosenthal.

The Browns Tie It.

The Sox resumed the lead in the fifth. Kennedy doubled to left and scored on Kuhel's single to right. Kreevich reached second and Kennedy third on Clift's error, then Wright was given an intentional pass, loading the bases. Appling tapped into a double play, Harris to Susce to McQuinn.

Rosenthal increased the Sox edge to 5 to 3 when he opened the sixth with his home run. The next three batsmen were retired in order.

Browns Go Into Lead.

The Browns scored three runs to grab a 6 to 5 lead in their half. Hoag opened with a single to right and went to third on Clift's single to center. Berardino doubled to left center, Hoag scoring and Clift stopping at second. Susce was given an intentional pass, loading the bases. Joe Grace was announced as the batter for Harris and when Manager Dykes countered with Lefty Edgar Smith, Chet Laabs was sent up for Grace. Laabs socked Smith's second pitch for a single to left, scoring Clift and Berardino. Clint Brown replaced Smith and the runners advanced on Strange's sacrifice. McNair threw out Judnich and McQuinn.

Kennedy opened the Chicago seventh against Roxie Lawson with a single to center. Kuhel flied to Judnich. Kreevich also flied to Judnich. Strange threw out Wright.

Radcliff opened the home seventh with a single and the Browns weren't too proud to sacrifice. Hoag bunted to Kuhel. Clift popped to Kennedy but Berardino tripled to right center, scoring Radcliff. McNair threw out Susce.

Dietrich Will Wind Up Brown Series Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., May 28.—Bill Dietrich has been invited to pitch for the White Sox in the final game of the Chicago-St. Louis series tomorrow, which would indicate Manager James Dykes wants rain for get-away day. Four times this season Dietrich has been slated to start and each time it has rained. Elden Auker is scheduled to pitch for the Browns.

The Sox, to get out of St. Louis on time tomorrow, will have to swing on a train in a nearby railroad yard. They will arrive in Cleveland at 5:30 o'clock Thursday morning.

Estate of Joe Jacobs Set at Less Than $5,000

New York, May 28 [Special].—Rose Jacobs, sister of the late Joe Jacobs, manager of Tony Galento, filed a petition for letters of administration of her brother's estate in Surrogates' court today. Jacobs died on April 24, leaving no will and, according to the application, an estate estimated on information and belief, not in excess of $5,000.

LANIER LIMITS CUBS TO 4 HITS; CARDS WIN, 5-0

Olsen Folds Up After Five Fine Innings.

The Cubs' sixth was somewhat of an event because it marked the appearance of their third hit. Hartnett batted for Olsen and bounced to Lanier. Hack was thrown out by Orengo, after which Herman singled to center. He was forced by Galan.

Big Welcome for Page.

Then Page took over as rescuer in the seventh, but his reception was on the stormy side. Lake nicked him for a single and after two were out was sent home on Medwick's single. Mize also singled, but Moore fouled to Todd.

During the seventh and eighth, only one Cub reached base. It was Russell who survived on an error by Orengo. The ninth was a little better, even tho the shutout couldn't be averted. Herman opened with a pass, Galan fouled out and Leiber rolled into a force play. Then Gleeson singled to center, but the finish came quickly on Russell's long fly to Moore.

OBERLIN TENNIS CAPTAIN.

Raffensberger or French to Face Cardinals Today

The Cardinals will be given another portion of southpaw pitching today in the final game of the Cub series in Wrigley field. They'll face either Larry French, who handed them a shutout earlier in the season, or Ken Raffensberger. The Cards will start either Lon Warneke or Bill McGee.

The Cubs' pitching staff, which appears to be undermanned, will experience its first real test within the next few days. There's a double header with the Reds tomorrow and another twin bill on Sunday against Brooklyn.

The lake wind gave the park an ice box like touch, but there weren't many sufferers. After looking over the turnstiles Secretary Bob Lewis announced 3,138 were present. This, at least, was an improvement over the 1,419 of the day previous.

B. B. Y. O. POSTS WEEK'S DELAY IN SOFTBALL PLAY

A one week postponement in the opening of the fifth annual B'nai B'rith Youth Organization city-wide softball tournament was announced last night by Sam Lifschultz, director, because of persistently inclement weather during the last few weekends.

"Many of the boys with the teams already entered asked for additional time to round out their squads, so we will now open our softball activity on Sunday, June 9, instead of June 2 as previously planned," Lifschultz added.

An extension of the entry deadline also was granted by Isadore Baskin, B. B. Y. O. softball chairman, who warned that the new deadline will be next Sunday at midnight. Entries must be filed with Nuss Elman, B. B. Y. O. registrar, Room 600, 6 North Clark street, telephone State 5352.

WRIGLEY SCOFFS AT BEES' CHARGE OF TAMPERING

"A tempest in a teapot" was the term applied by P. K. Wrigley, Cub owner, yesterday when informed Bob Quinn, president of the Boston Bees, had threatened to complain to Baseball Commissioner Landis about the Cubs' alleged offers for Eddie Miller, star shortstop.

In a telegram to Quinn, the Chicago magnate disclaimed responsibility for various rumors which have been cooked up for the past two weeks and pointed out they obviously were fabricated in some one's imagination.

"I know and you must know that no proposition was made by either side for any definite player or players or amounts of cash," said Wrigley in his telegram. "All stories brought to me have been obviously fabricated in some one's imagination and I thought they would be obviously so to you. If we wanted to make a deal with Boston we would contact you direct and not thru the press. I have made this message public to stop, if possible, a further tempest in a teapot."

"THE CHOICEST PRODUCT OF THE BREWERS' ART"

SCHALLER FINDS INDUSTRIAL LINES SPURRED BY WAR

Steel Output Makes Most Pronounced Gain.

Business and agriculture in the 7th federal reserve district have been affected "profoundly" by the sudden intensification of the European war, George J. Schaller, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, said yesterday.

George J. Schaller.

Reporting that several lines of industry have expanded, Schaller said this was particularly true of heavy industries such as steel making.

"There has been a drastic reappraisal of values, most notable repercussions being felt in the grain and security markets," Schaller said in a review of business conditions. "Available May data indicate that district industrial activity has advanced.

Steel Operations Gain.

"Reflecting generally increased demand, steel mill operations have risen sharply. With the spread of the war belligerents augmented orders for steel in this country, but such orders are expected to affect this district only indirectly, as most finished steel for export is fabricated in the east."

Latest available data indicate increased activity in malleable castings plants, in orders and shipments by stove and furnace manufacturers, and in furniture production and orders, Schaller said. Paper mills in the district increased their sales. Construction work was reported holding at a "good rate."

Refinery Operations Lag.

However, oil refineries failed to show their customary seasonal gain in operations, and gasoline stocks remained unusually heavy, according to the review.

Information on district employment, covering April, indicated a minor decline compared with March, but total industrial employment was 8 per cent above the April, 1939, level, Schaller said.

Schaller reported an increase of about 25 per cent in April tonnage sales of packing house products over last year, but a gain of only 5 per cent in dollar sales. April export demand for meat products was "disappointing," he said.

Swiss Charter 15 Greek Freighters as Supply Ships

New York, May 28 (AP).—The Swiss government has chartered 15 Greek freighters to serve as supply ships for its industries and military forces. The Swiss consulate general said that war-disrupted supply sources and the scarcity of bottoms to transport merchandise made necessary the chartering. One of the ships, the 10,000 ton Kassos, is docked in New York now. All vessels will use Genoa as a terminal port as long as Italy remains a neutral.

TAX REFORMS ADVOCATED AS DEFENSE STEP

Big Need Economic Health—Hanes.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

As a measure of national defense, John W. Hanes, former undersecretary of the treasury, last night proposed a series of tax reforms to aid the rebuilding of the weakened domestic economic structure. The restoration of domestic economic health, he said, is essential to the full development of national defenses. He spoke at the annual dinner of the Illinois Bankers' association at the Palmer House.

John W. Hanes.

Hanes said that the breakdown in the domestic economy in the last decade had seriously impaired the industrial structure. Instead of a "normal" expansion in industrial plant investment there has occurred a shrinkage that cut the plant investment from the 1929 total of 40½ billion dollars to less than 32 billions at the end of 1937. Under normal rate of growth, he said, the national industrial plant investment today should amount to about 48 billion dollars.

Road to Economic Health.

Hanes declared that the only road back to sound economic health is the restoration of private enterprise to a profitable operation. To accomplish this, he said, a revision of the national tax laws is essential.

The former undersecretary left his post in the Roosevelt administration last December. In office he had striven vigorously to bring about a better understanding between business and the administration. His resignation was one of a series in recent years among high ranking officials in the treasury department.

Careless handling of the tax system, he said, has had much to do with the present economic distress. To put the federal tax system on a basis that would permit private industry to resume its growth, he proposed changes in the existing statutes.

Suggests Law Changes.

These suggestions were:

1. Repeal of the 1935 revenue bill, known as the "soak the rich" bill. This would restore 1934 surtax rates, bringing the maximum rate down from 79 to 59 per cent. The latter figure is still too high, Hanes said.

2. Reduce existing estate and inheritance taxes which now are "confiscatory." [This would partly be accomplished by the repeal of the 1935 tax bill.]

3. Repeal the capital stock and excess profits taxes.

4. Permit corporations to file consolidated tax returns whereby the losses of one subsidiary could be used to offset profits of another.

5. Repeal the tax on intercorporate dividends.

6. Permit individuals to buy insurance to finance the payment of death duties without increasing the size of their estates and the tax liability thereon.

7. Tax income on future government securities.

Would Revamp Personal Taxes.

To finance the new defense program Hanes suggested revamping the personal income tax law to increase the normal tax rates, reduce exemptions, increase surtax rates in the middle income brackets, and lower the rates in the higher brackets. More revenue could be obtained thru excise or sales taxes, he said.

The excise tax, he said, is in effect a sales tax and it has been proved that it is not an undue burden to business and industry and does not dry up the sources of revenue as do many existing taxes.

"It may be," he said, "that a broad extension of the excise tax will be necessary to raise additional revenue."

Hanes attacked the use of the tax laws to accomplish social reforms.

"If we wish to effect social change," he said, "there is no reason, but cowardice, that we should not go to congress, the duly elected representatives of all the people, to tell them frankly what we want them to accomplish."

Face Many Troubles.

Without the incentive for private enterprise to function efficiently, he said, we face the economic consequences "of unbalanced budgets, destructive taxation, lack of capital issues for productive purposes, loss of enterprising spirit, absence of profits, increased unemployment, and insecurity and labor troubles."

More than 1,000 bankers attended last night's dinner which concluded the first day's session of the association's annual convention. John J. Anton, president of the association, and others addressed the convention earlier in the day.

The association's nominating committee presented the following slate of officers for the coming year: For president, Charles R. Reardon, vice president, First National bank, Joliet; for vice president, Earl C. Adams executive vice president, Jersey State bank, Jerseyville, and for treasurer, William Busse Jr., president of the Mount Prospect State bank, Mount Prospect.

The election will be held this afternoon.

Losses Extend to 50c in Hog Market Break

Selling swept hog markets thruout the country yesterday, driving prices down in the sharpest one day break since the war selling of early last September. Declines at leading packing centers ranged from 15 to 50 cents, with more severe losses at smaller yards where supplies were excessive.

Chicago prices broke 30 to 40 cents. Top hogs fell 30 cents to $5.55. Best loads at Indianapolis sold at $5.40, off 50 cents. Sioux City was the lowest of the big markets, with a top of $5.10.

Supplies poured into the Chicago stock yards all day. Shipments reached 39,000, against early estimates of 34,000, and were the largest for any day since Jan. 22.

Far Above Last Week.

Shipments were only 14,701 on Tuesday of last week. Eleven leading markets handled 115,000, compared with 55,000 a week earlier.

Most of the hundreds of farmers in the Chicago market said the unfavorable corn-hog price ratio and the growing shortage of corn available for feed were principally responsible for the heavy sales.

Approximately 20,000 hogs arrived by truck, only 6,000 short of the market's record truck run. Owners arrived with a few head each to the equivalent of several railroad carloads. At times the line of trucks leading into the yards was a mile or more long, but unloading was rapid and practically all stock that arrived in time was ready for selling when trading opened.

Few Reach $5.55 Peak.

Only a few lots reached the $5.55 peak, the closing top being $5.40. A large share of the crop consisted of good 200 to 260 pound fall and winter pigs that brought $5.35 and $5.40, pigs that brought $5.35 and $5.40.

Cattle also were marketed in much larger volume. The Chicago supply was 8,500, compared with 5,160 a week earlier. Most offerings of steers and yearlings sold weak to 15 cents lower, with some sales off 25 cents. The slim supply of plainer grades and the few loads of choice steers available brought steady prices.

Lambs ruled strong to 25 cents higher. Best shorn lambs brought $9.80. City butchers gave $12.25 for selected native springers.

NEW AIRCRAFT COMPANY FILES 370,000 SHARES

Washington, D. C., May 28 (AP)—Continental Aviation and Engineering corporation, Detroit, a company organized May 13 to develop "high output" airplane engines, today filed with the securities commission a registration statement covering 370,000 shares of $1 par common stock.

The corporation disclosed that it had been formed to take over from Continental Motors corporation all of its business in connection with airplane engines of 500 horsepower or more.

Explaining that its military orders were for development rather than production, the company said that there was presently "an unprecedented demand" for high powered engines and that this country had only three large producing sources of such motors.

Proceeds from sale of the stock, estimated at $686,000, will be used for working capital, including purchase of tools, dies, patterns, and special instruments, the company said.

King Leopold's Action Is Blow to Bond Trade

King Leopold's surrender of the Belgium army to Germany yesterday brought gloom to the New York bond market. As Belgian government loans tumbled 10 to 15 points, bonds of other allied countries were also carried lower.

Even domestic corporate bonds and United States government issues were depressed despite favorable news of improving industrial activity in this country.

Empire Bonds Weaken.

Canadian, Australian, and other British empire loans dropped as much as 5⅛ points and several issues sank to new low marks for the year. German and Italian dollar loans closed ¾ to 2 points higher.

Among the foreign issues which lost heavily were the Belgian 6s of '55, Canadian 4s and 5s, Norway 6s, and Antwerp 5s. In the corporate list declines of 1 to 4 points were recorded for Canadian National Railways 4½s of '51, Delaware and Hudson refunding 4s, Commonwealth Edison convertible 3⅛s, Illinois Central 4¾s, Republic Steel 4½s, and Southern Railway 4s.

SALES OF HOME FURNISHINGS GAIN OVER LAST YEAR

Sales at wholesale of home furnishings followed seasonal trends in April and gained substantially in most lines over the corresponding month in 1939, Percy Wilson, managing director of the Merchandise Mart, reported yesterday. His report was based on a survey of 1,860 lines of goods handled at the mart.

Germany's invasion of the lowlands was followed by many cancellations of orders but buying has since been resumed, Wilson said. He attributed a rise in gift sales to retailers fears that supplies might be curtailed by spread of the war.

	March, 1940.	April, 1939

C. & E. I. CHANGES NAME OF NEW ISSUE OF STOCK

Reorganization managers of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railway have decided to designate the senior issue of stock class A stock rather than preferred, as was provided in the plan of reorganization, to comply with listing requirements of the New York Stock exchange, it was disclosed yesterday.

The managers decided that the exchange's requirements could be met by merely renaming the stock rather than changing its basic provisions and modifying the plan.

Austin S. Iglehart has been chosen to be a director of the new company, completing the panel of 13 directors whose names will be set forth in the certificate of incorporation.

TURN BUTTON, YOU GET SUNSHINE TO SHADOW IN NEW EYE GLASSES

Cambridge, Mass., May 28 (AP).—Sun glasses with a push button on the nose bridge which will dim the light to any degree of brightness desired, were announced today by the Polaroid corporation.

Polaroid is a synthetic substance made of quinine and iodine salts, but resembling glass. The stuff polarizes light. This means that when a person looks thru two pieces of polaroid, lying one on the other, he can shut off the light merely by rotating one of the "glasses."

The new glasses have two lenses for each eye. The outside lenses are fixed. The inner ones rotate with a push of the button.

Push to the left and the lenses transmit light freely. Push the other way and the light dims steadily, according to how far the button moves. The button is set to stop before the wearer dials himself into a complete blackout.

War News Aids or Jolts Many World Markets

Prices of many stocks soared 10 to 30 points on the securities market in Rome as a result of the turn of events in Belgium. Stocks of two metallurgical companies skyrocketed 65 to 82 points. Dispatches from Rome said traders took the view that military developments increased the likelihood that Italy's hand in international affairs would be strengthened.

London and Paris securities markets pointed downward. At Copenhagen the Danish stock exchange reopened after a shutdown of seven weeks, but only bonds were traded. Prices advanced the 1 point limit set by law. Trading in stocks will be resumed later.

Gold Inflow Increases.

Latest figures on imports of gold into the United States disclosed that $164,906,059 of the metal streamed in during the week ended May 22. This was $65,000,000 more than arrivals in the preceding week. Most of the gold was shipped from Canada, which accounted for $129,983,239 of the total. Government officials said the inflow from Canada probably was in connection with British war purchases.

Other parts of the British empire sent gold in smaller amounts. The United Kingdom shipped $11,633,637, Australia $5,023,720, and South Africa $5,100,585. Other receipts included $2,728,026 from Italy and $3,222,170 from the Netherlands.

British Money Slumps.

In the New York foreign exchange market the British pound sterling closed at $3.17½ for a net loss of 1¾ cents after rallying from a plunge of 7 cents earlier in the day. The Canadian dollar closed 1 cent lower at 78⅝ cents in American money. A decline of 0.015 cent left the French franc at 1.79 cents.

At Oslo, Norway, the foreign exchange market was reopened after having been closed in the German invasion. The price of the krone was equal to 22.72 cents at the quotation of 4.40 kroner to the American dollar. No quotation was listed for British or French currencies and in some quarters this was said to indicate German domination of the Norwegian market.

URGES UNITING ALL NORTHWEST POWER PLANTS

Raver Pushes Plan to Aid Defense.

BY JOHN FISHER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 28.—In line with the administration's plans for a giant government-owned power transmission grid to cost about 200 million dollars, Paul J. Raver, Bonneville dam power administrator, today urged the interconnection of all power facilities in the Pacific northwest.

Under the winning label of national defense the administration is expected to push the idea of a national power grid, advanced by the National Power Policy committee. The administration has been attempting to win private utilities' support of the plan. The government would finance a large part of the 2,500 miles of transmission lines and other equipment contemplated in the grid system.

Expert opinion in the utility industry is that such a system would merely duplicate existing facilities and provide a stepping stone to further socialization of the power industry.

Trend Well Under Way.

Socialization began with creation of the Tennessee Valley authority, Bonneville, Grand Coulee, and other government projects. It is also argued that in England the government's power grid has proved more vulnerable to attack and would cripple a wide area if damaged.

In a memorandum to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes the Bonneville administrator said that "if we are to be prepared to meet the power demands of the national defense program, with its inherent industrial expansion, it is necessary that we accelerate the completion of the interconnection of the government plants on the Columbia river with all existing utilities in the area."

[Last week Oregon voters overwhelmingly rejected retail distribution of Bonneville dam power thru a public ownership arrangement. Raver hastened to Washington following this defeat in which but one Oregon community voted for public ownership. Not long before this another community, Eugene, Ore., had voted against buying Bonneville power.]

Termed Industrial Aid.

The administrator said that the Pacific northwest with its large power supplies, thru integration, would lend itself to the development of three groups of industries: existing industries requiring expansion, those depending upon raw materials in that area, and war industries requiring decentralization.

Raver recommended that steps be taken immediately to speed up completion of the Bonneville interconnection with Tacoma and Seattle, Wash.; build a second line into the Grays Harbor area of western Washington; provide for complete interconnection of Grand Coulee and Bonneville dams with the plants in the Spokane, Seattle, and Portland areas thru construction of additional transmission lines; provide funds for related purposes, and speed up installation of generators at Bonneville and Grand Coulee.

Coincident with these proposals it was reported that President Roosevelt and his aids are studying the feasibility of developing defense industries near strategically located, inland hydro-electric centers such as in the TVA area.

Provide More Outlets.

This would enable the government to sell more of its power to government financed plants expected to be erected under the national defense program. The plants would use surplus power generated at the federal projects and also at a number of state power dams built with federal funds.

The TVA and Bonneville projects have been competing between themselves recently for the power business of the vast Aluminum Company of America, with Bonneville coming out ahead by cutting rates on the TVA. In the shuffle private power lost out because it could not compete with the tax-free government projects.

The power squeeze against private utilities continued today with the Alabama Power company filing application with the Federal Power commission for authority to sell about $4,600,000 worth of its electric facilities in northern Alabama to the TVA and a group of nine coöperative associations and municipalities. After the sale, all of the power needed for these facilities will be supplied by the TVA, according to the application.

Rally Reduces Part of Severe Stock Losses

New York, May 28 (AP).—Stocks toppled as much as 7 points today after the Belgian surrender to Germany, but the majority rebounded sharply at the close.

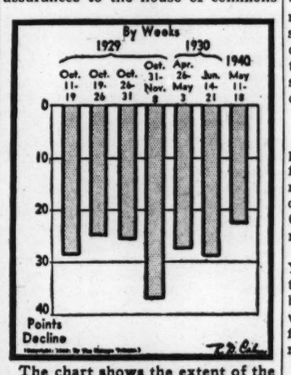
A recovery got under way after the first shock of the surprising capitulation, when blocks of 1,000 to 10,000 shares of leading steels, motors, and aircrafts were unloaded, many at new two year lows.

Dealings in the first hour, when prices were at bottom, were about half the day's total transfers of 1,263,510 shares. Yesterday's volume was 791,260 shares.

Closing Average Is Lower.

Despite the comeback which enabled a number of issues to erase more than two-thirds of their morning relapse, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off 0.8 of a point net at 38. At this level Monday's rally was more than wiped out and the composite stood one-tenth of a point above the 1940 low.

Sentiment was heartened to some extent by Prime Minister Churchill's assurances to the house of commons that the British and French would battle to a finish. Reports the allies were preparing for a heavy counter-attack also were helpful.



The chart shows the extent of the slump in the stock market during the week ended May 18 in relation to the declines recorded in selected weekly periods during 1929 and 1930. Changes shown are based on Dow-Jones averages for 25 industrial shares.

A sustaining influence was the belief of some in Wall street that the already huge domestic rearmament program would be accelerated if the Nazis should win. Steels, among principal beneficiaries of arms spending, were outstanding in the rally.

A few observers found mild inflationary portents in the announcement the administration planned to cover defense expenditures by new taxes, special bonds, and an increase of $3,000,000,000 in the national debt limit thru quick passage of legislation by congress.

Steel Stocks Decline.

Stocks down 1 to about 4 points at the close included United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Lockheed, Sears-Roebuck, American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, du Pont, Allied Chemical, Kennecott, American Smelting, and Great Northern.

A handful contested the trend with modest advances. Among these were American Can, Westinghouse, General Electric, and Johns-Manville.

Not so cheering to brokerage quarters was the sale of another stock exchange seat for $42,000, off $1,000 from a transfer yesterday to a new low since 1915.

Curb stocks also toppled, but partly righted themselves before the conclusion of the session.

CHICAGO STOCKS FALL.

War news boosted trading on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday to 34,000 shares, with losses on volume leaders ranging as high as ⅞ point. Only 11 issues recorded gains, 82 closing lower and 24 finishing unchanged. Commonwealth Edison, the volume leader, sagged ⅝ point, Armour was off ⅛, Fuller Manufacturing ¼, Chicago corporation ⅜, and Swift ⅞.

WITHDRAW WAR RISK RATES TO SEVERAL PORTS

New York, May 28 (AP).—American marine insurance underwriters today withdrew all rate schedules for war risk insurance on shipments between the western hemisphere and the English east coast north of Southampton and the French coast north of Brest.

Underwriters announced that shippers desiring war risk coverage on such voyages could obtain rates "only on application."

The rate on shipments to other United Kingdom ports, to Ireland and to Brest was fixed at 3½ per cent of the value of the cargo. The rate on shipments from those ports was set at 3 per cent.

RAIL WARNS IT WILL USE OIL IF COAL ADVANCES

Others Also Attack Price Fixing.

Washington, D. C., May 28 (AP).—The New York, New Haven, and Hartford railroad, one of several public utilities complaining against the proposed minimum prices for bituminous coal, warned today it would use oil rather than pay for solid fuel at the levels proposed.

H. L. Filer, insisting he was "not bluffing," told Howard A. Gray, director of the interior department's coal division that the prices recommended by examiners would increase the road's annual fuel bill $325,000. Filer said the road once before turned to oil when coal prices rose 23 cents a ton. Under the proposed prices, he said, the increase would be 30 to 35 cents a ton.

Others Make Objections.

Exceptions to the recommended prices also were argued by counsel for the Chicago Great Western railroad, the Indiana Gas and Chemical company of Terre Haute, the Laclede Gas Light company, St. Louis, and a number of individual producers.

The Associated Industries of New York asserted that the method of bituminous coal price fixing was illegal because Secretary of Interior Ickes was accepting the production cost findings of the abolished coal commission.

Charles R. Lamb, who said the industries he represented consumed 12,500,000 tons annually, told Gray it was "inconceivable that the secretary of the interior or his director should attempt to rely on the commission's cost determination." Lamb contended that before the division could establish prices validly it would have to make its own production cost determinations.

Steel Company Complains.

William F. Price, representing the Inland Steel company, complained that he would have to pay the base price of $1.75 for district 7 smokeless byproduct coals whereas steel plants in competing centers, such as Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Erie, Youngstown, and Gary, under the prices recommended to the division, would pay 25 to 30 cents a ton less for the same coal.

A study prepared for the attorney general's committee on administrative procedure said today that "36 months of tremendous if sometimes misguided effort and the expenditure of perhaps $20,000,000 by government and industry" have not yet accomplished the price-fixing aim of the 1937 bituminous coal act.

The lengthy monograph, prepared for use of the committee in its investigation of procedural problems of federal agencies, said:

"If bituminous coal needed the crutch of price control in 1937, three more years without it have presumably worsened its condition."

REPORT FRANCE WILL BUY 75,000 TONS OF COPPER

New York, May 28 (AP).—Copper trade sources reported today that France virtually had completed negotiations for purchasing 75,000 additional tons of copper, mainly from American companies. The contemplated order would bring France's wartime copper purchases to 375,000 long tons valued at almost $100,000,000. The value of the proposed purchase is about $18,900,000.

Participants in the order, it was said, would be Anaconda Copper Mining company, from its mines in Chile and its Greene Cananea property in Mexico; Kennecott Copper corporation, from its Braden mine in Chile; Union Miniere du Haut Katanga, the Belgian-Congo Mining company, and American Metal Co., Ltd., as selling agent for Cerro de Pasco Copper company, with properties in Peru.

BANKERS LAUNCH DRIVE TO RELAX SECURITIES LAWS

'Take Inventory' to Prove Their Aid to Trade.

Information never before assembled about the investment banking business will be gathered by the Investment Bankers' Association of America thru questionnaires now being issued, the association announced yesterday in Chicago.

Emmett F. Connely.

The census will be the first step in a program designed to place before the public information showing how investment bankers have contributed to private enterprise and business expansion, Emmett F. Connely, association president, said.

Connely recently took a leave of absence from his firm, First of Michigan Corporation of Detroit, to lead the program as chairman of the association's public information committee.

Termed "Inventory Taking."

He said that in sending out the questionnaires in an "internal inventory taking of the business," the organization is "laying the cornerstone for the foundation of fact" on which to base its drive for public support in its demand for relaxation of federal securities laws.

"The logical starting point of our fact finding is to be in our own offices," Connely said. "We are asking our members to provide, confidentially, an X-ray picture of their business as of May 31, and a history of their operations over the last five years.

"The questionnaires ask I. B. A. members to provide facts never before assembled about the investment banking business. Included will be figures on capital employed, volume of business, and profits and losses. Members will be asked to list the number of employés and executives, and their aggregate compensation."

Emphasis on Underwriting.

Most emphasis, however, will be placed on data showing the participation of I. B. A. members in the underwriting and sale of new securities, Connely said.

Association members will be asked to list the new financing in which they have participated in the last five years, together with information indicating how the financing helped build up the nation's capital equipment.

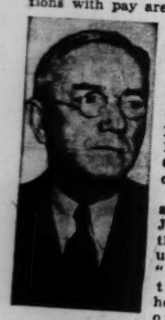
RAILS DECLARE UNION VACATION PLAN 'CRIPPLING'

Roads Counter with Pay Cut Proposal.

Railway union demands for vacations with pay are without justification and particularly crippling at this time, Charles E. Johnston, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives, with headquarters in Chicago, declared yesterday.



Charles E. Johnston.

Two weeks ago, according to Johnston, all of the railroad unions except the "Big Five"—those brotherhoods consisting of service employés — served notice of demands for the paid vacations on every railroad in the country.

In turn, the western railroads comprising the organization headed by Johnston, have countered the demand with a proposed wage reduction of 10 per cent for all nonoperating employés.

The nonoperating employés who made the demands, principally clerks, mechanics, electrical workers, and dispatchers, received wage increases in 1937, Johnston said. Granting of the vacations would be tantamount to a wage increase, he said.

Maintained Wages Despite Loss.

Railways, particularly in the west, have suffered severe losses in recessions since the 1937 pay raises, but have maintained the wage schedules, Johnston emphasized.

"Now the roads are faced with a demand equivalent to a further increase in wages to a level even above that prevailing in 1929 at the peak of our national prosperity," he said.

Johnston said the individual western railroads made the following reply to the labor organizations:

Give 30 Day Notice.

"Recent developments clearly indicate the necessity of conserving the resources of all industry and transportation agencies at maximum efficiency. We therefore assume you will wish to withdraw your notice. If, however, you desire to proceed with it, we hereby give 30 days' notice of our desire and intent to decrease all existing rates of pay of all employés represented by your organization in the amount of 10 per cent."

The notice contained a paragraph paving the way for conferences between the carriers and the labor unions, Johnston said, with a view to settling the matter on a reasonable basis.

GASOLINE PRICE CUTTING SPREADS IN CALIFORNIA

San Francisco, Cal., May 28 (AP).—Gasoline price cutting became general today. The cuts were started by Standard Oil company of California.

Prices went down 2½ cents a gallon on first grade, 1½ on second, and 2 on third. San Francisco prices were 19, 17, and 15 cents respectively on the three grades.

Standard's brief and unexpected announcement of the cuts merely stated the company acted to meet competition.

Prices Cut in North East.

New York, May 28 [Special].—The Socony-Vacuum Oil company tomorrow will make reductions of about ½ cent a gallon in the tank wagon prices of kerosene and heating oils thruout New England and New York, except western New York.

Bell Aircraft's Stock Plan Approved; No Early Offering

Buffalo, N. Y., May 28 (AP).—Stockholders of the Bell Aircraft corporation today approved an increase in shares from 250,000 to 500,000, but the directors, meeting immediately afterward, decided "not to offer any additional shares at this time," a company statement said. Stockholders also approved an employés' stock purchase plan.

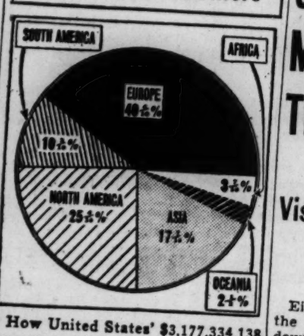
America's Customers



How United States' $3,177,334,138 export trade in 1939 was divided among chief divisions of world.

So. American Outlook Believed Better.

Dwindling of markets for American goods in Europe—which last year bought 40.4 per cent of all United States exports—has centered attention on other geographical divisions, particularly South America, as offering the best hope in this country's search for new customers.

In 1939, South America bought 10.3 per cent of the goods exported from the United States. Business men in this country had severe competition from Germany and England, the Nazis having seized much trade by barter methods and the British having negotiated certain exchange agreements which garnered a large share of South American patronage.

Trade Prospects Better.

Now, however, Britain's preoccupation with the war and the inability of both Germany and England to produce or transport as much goods for South America as in peacetime, makes the outlook for United States exporters brighter.

Another promising market for United States goods is Oceania [which includes Australia and New Zealand], until now a buyer of only 2½ per cent of America's total exports. Africa, which last year accounted for 3.7 per cent of United States sales abroad, also is expected to buy more in this market as long as the war lasts.

Prospects in Asia are said to be doubtful. Asia accounted for 17.7 per cent of American exports last year.

Other Sales May Increase.

Sales to America's North American customers, chiefly Canada and Mexico, may increase, trade authorities assert. Exports to North American markets in 1939 were 25.4 per cent of all sales abroad.

Exports from the United States last year to geographical divisions of the world were: To North America, $806,552,026; to South America, $329,385,892; to Europe, $1,285,994,475; to Asia, $560,796,160; to Oceania, $79,505,231, and to Africa, $115,110,354. The total was $3,177,344,138.

Imports from these divisions—totaling $2,318,258,379—compared as follows: From North America, $580,874,029; from South America, $317,264,863; from Europe, $617,328,918; from Asia, $699,447,166; from Oceania, $26,704,914, and from Africa, $76,638,489.

TRUCK DECISION MAY BRING LABOR PACT REVISIONS

Existing labor contracts between trucking concerns and the major part of their employés may have to be changed as a result of the United States Supreme court's ruling putting all employés of motor carriers, except truck drivers, under the wage-hour law. This opinion was expressed yesterday by officials of several large Chicago trucking concerns, who said that the full effect of the ruling could be discovered only after a complete study.

The Interstate Commerce commission had contended that its power to regulate the hours of service of motor-carrier employés applied only to those whose duties affect safety of operation—drivers and helpers. The court upheld the contention which was contested by the American Trucking Associations, Inc., of Washington, D. C.

The I. C. C. has authorized a 60 hour week for drivers. The fair labor standards act provides a work week ranging from 40 hours to 44 hours a week.

80 BUSINESS MEN MAKE FRIENDSHIP TRIP DOWNSTATE

Visit Big Staley Plant at Decatur.

Eighty Chicago business men took the day off yesterday to carry to downstate Illinois a message of friendship from Chicago. They were members of the Chicago Association of Commerce and their journey was one of several designed to improve relations between Chicago and other cities within the state. The party traveled on a special train on the Illinois Central.

The high spot of a tour on which Decatur business men took the Chicagoans was a visit to the big grain processing plant of the A. E. Staley Manufacturing company.

The Chicagoans received proof anew of the opportunity that is given by America when they were told the company had its origin when a young starch salesman named Augustus E. Staley in 1898 decided to stop working for others and go into business for himself. Now, about a tenth of the town's population, officially announced by the census yesterday as 59,129, is dependent on the Staley plant.

Soy Bean Gains Importance.

Altho the larger part of the Staley activity is the processing of corn, the processing of soy beans is increasing in importance. The founder of the company, who came from North Carolina, was one of the first in the country to sense the value of the soy bean as an American crop and Illinois now leads the nation in the growing of the soy bean. During the seven week crop harvesting period last year the Illinois Central railroad alone brought 5,100 carloads to the plant and each carload consisted of 1,500 bushels.

Dominating the Staley plant is an 11 story office building that resembles a state capitol and boasts offices of a luxury rarely seen in Chicago. The purchasing department even has its own board room in which are quoted grain prices in all parts of the world.

Products of Company.

Products of the plant include starches and various other corn products, soy bean oil, and soy bean meal. Its soy bean mill is the largest in the world.

Large warehouses and processing plants of three other companies help to give Decatur its name as the soy bean capital of the nation. Besides being used as meal for feeding cattle and for other purposes, the soy bean is now being converted into plastics —a use said to be in its infancy.

The Chicagoans were luncheon guests at the Decatur club, at which the speakers included J. L. Beven, president of the Illinois Central, and Joseph E. Magnus, Chicago, who urged that Illinoisans do more to promote the advantages of the state.

Spend 30 Million to Boost Canadian Output of Shells

OTTAWA, Ont., May 28 (AP).—Thirty million dollars is being spent to enlarge plants and install equipment for increasing Canada's output of shells, the department of munitions and supply announced today. The plant facilities will increase to 13 or 14 factories engaged in shell production, it was said. Eight plants now are manufacturing an order of 2,250,000 shells. The new facilities will increase this production to about 4,500,000.
